✪ VENDORS ✪

Many of the food vendors have learned to cater to visiting New Mexico cowboy tastes ... and have begun selling green chile cheeseburgers (yes, that's chile). They're addictive! For you folks "back east," put this western delicacy on your "must try" list ... you won't be disappointed!

Judge Roy Bean held sway in the SASS booth all through Winter Range. He's there to meet folks and hear what they have to say. Yes, he's a gruff, harassable old coot ... but he's also a delight to chat with. Take the opportunity to meet him when he visits a match near you.

Vendors do more for a match than most folks realize. Their mere presence provides an ambiance that is missing from smaller matches ... and, it's an opportunity to collect missing pieces of your accoutrements ... often pieces you didn't even know you were missing! Large matches are a wonderful place to do your shopping, handle the latest new products from the firearms vendors, get your favorite shootin' iron engraved, acquire a wonderful set of new grips, get fitted for a set of custom boots, complete your costume, and even get a wonderful "period" keepsake photo of you among the cactus in your best "lawdog" outfit! Be sure and spend some money with them and let them know they're appreciated!

WINTER RANGE 2013

The SASS National Championship of Cowboy Action Shooting™

By Larsen E. Pettifogger, SASS Life/Regulator #32933

In Memory of Our Lost Friends

Phoenix, AZ – 2013 was a year for the record books. There were well over 800 applications submitted for the Cowboy Action Shooting™ match, although the match was ultimately limited to 792. Each time someone cancelled, their spot was filled from a waiting list. Wild Bunch was full with 125 shooters, there were 235 Mounted Shooters and there were 100 vendors. The cowboy match was full by December 2, almost three weeks earlier than Winter Range 2012. It was also a year of record setting weather—weather that varied from the high 70s under crystal clear skies to a first ever blizzard in Phoenix! And, the week was capped by a ferocious windstorm.

Winter Range is an annual labor of love put on by the Arizona Territorial Company of Rough Riders. The Rough Riders consist of twenty-one individuals that volunteer hundreds of hours of their time to put on this once a year event. Winter Range is not a club and puts on no other shoots. It is a not-for-profit corporation whose sole mission is to put on the annual SASS National Championships.

THE HOAX OF MISDIRECTION

By El Alacran, SASS #20694

John Donne, the poet, once wrote: Never send to know for whom the bell tolls; It tolls for thee. Today the bell clangs louder than ever, and it does indeed toll for thee. The bell-ringers, to no one's surprise, are Liberal politicians in Congress and our state legislatures. They are sounding the death knell for your right to own a gun.

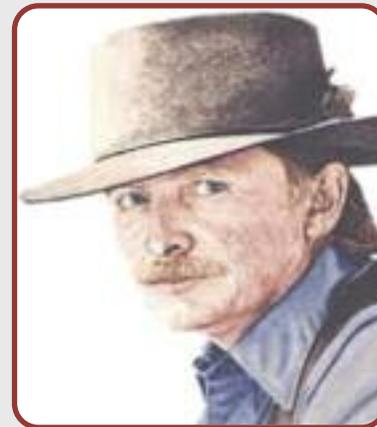

In the current gun control debate, politicians are employing the magician's ancient art of trickery known as "misdirection." A magician will distract your attention with one hand while he performs sleight-of-hand (his magic) with the other hand. In effect, crafty politicians use misdirection to fool the public about the truth of gun control. Consider some of their more devious sleight-of-hand maneuvers.

A study of twelve school shootings concluded the majority were murder-suicides. The shooters killed themselves at the schools, or committed suicide-by-cop in shootouts with no thought of survival. These tragic murders of innocent children were the diabolic acts of insane killers who should have been locked away. Yet we hear nothing from Liberal politicians about the urgent need to re-open mental institutions and fund treatment of the mentally ill. Nor are the mentally ill entered into the federal background-check database for firearms purchases. Instead, politicians demonize guns and are silent about the real problem, the psychos—a perfect illustration of misdirection.

The so-called "Assault Rifle" is yet another example. These are semi-automatic rifles—one shot at a time—just like the rifles already commonly owned by millions of law-abiding Americans. Politicians, guided by an ulterior motive, call them "weapons of war" and mislead the public to believe they are the same as fully automatic machine guns used by the military. Further, according to FBI records, only 2.6 percent of murders are committed with rifles of any kind, and less than 1 percent with the so-called "Assault Rifle." Of course, to gull the public yet again, such statistics are never revealed by politicians—still another illustration of misdirection.

El Alacran, SASS #20694

Syracuse University tracks the Justice Department in its enforcement of federal gun laws. The latest report concludes in the past four years weapons prosecutions have declined to the lowest level in a decade. Tens of thousands of firearms purchases were denied by the government's instant background check. Of that number, only 13—that's right, 13!—resulted in convictions, less than two one-hundredths of one percent. Yet the Liberal anti-gunners are now proposing the critical need for a "universal background check." Absolute silence about the dismal conviction record of the past, but an outcry by politicians for the same-old, same-old phrased in a different manner—once more, perfection in the art of misdirection.

Liberal politicians have the mindset the Constitution, particularly the Second Amendment, is an obstacle to be abolished. New York Governor Andrew Cuomo has remarked that "Confiscation is not off the table" with respect to guns. Senator Dianne Feinstein (Calif.), after her campaign to outlaw semi-automatic firearms, said: "If I could have gotten 51 votes ... for an outright ban, picking up every one of them ... Mr. and Mrs. America, turn 'em all in! I would have done it." Senator Charles Schumer (NY) revealed in an interview the goal is "universal registration" of both guns and gun owners. As we know from such democratic countries as England and Australia, gun registration soon leads to gun confiscation. Politicians are simply employing the trickery of misdirection in their current anti-gun sleight-of-hand. When they propose registration, their actual goal is confiscation.

Anyone who believes politicians are genuinely motivated by the safety of school children has a naïve and misguided trust in the Liberal members of Congress. Their intent is to demolish the Second Amendment—the right to keep and bear arms—and thereby forever disarm the American people. They are merely using the murder of innocent children as a cynical and unconscionable excuse. What they want are your guns. Every gun you own.

President Ronald Reagan once cautioned: "We struggle to preserve freedom every day. And freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction."

We are that generation and now is our time. Stand and fight for liberty!

Call your members of Congress today at 202-224-3121. Tell them you strongly oppose any further gun control legislation. Tell them you will not tolerate infringement of your Constitutional liberties. Join Colonel Dan and Team SASS in our fight to preserve our Second Amendment rights.

(Click on that scrolling banner, and it takes you right to the membership signup page.) Everyone in SASS joined because they love the life and lore surrounding the people and the guns that won the Old West. They like shooting those guns even more! However, what separates SASS from virtually all other shooting sports is in addition to shooting guns from a specific time period in American history, SASS also requires its members dress in period clothing. Somehow standing out on the firing line shooting blackpowder out of a double barrel shotgun and wearing a baseball hat and nylon camouflage gear just don't seem right! So, when you join SASS, in addition to selecting an alias, carefully choosing your firearms, and potential shooting categories, you also start looking for suitable clothing to match your shooting style and the persona you have chosen to emulate. For many, dressing in period clothing is as important as the shooting aspect of our game.

After hours (particularly if it is Saturday night after bath time!) and after the guns are cleaned and put away, people turn out in their finest 19th Century attire. You can see ladies of the night, ladies in their finest ball gowns, saloon girls, gentlemen in their finest Sunday go-to-meeting suits, soldiers, sailors,

The judging panel was rounded out with Pea Patch, SASS #23840, and Emma Starr, SASS #3517.

Although the weather at Winter Range 2013 varied from bright and sunny with temperatures in the high 70s to a snowstorm on Wednesday(!), by Saturday the skies cleared to reveal a beautiful day, and the shooters came out wearing some very fine and often very creative costumes. The four judges walked the shooting line on each wave taking pictures of costumes and gun carts. After careful review and discussion, decisions on the Working Costume winners were made with many difficult choices that left the judges wishing there were a few more categories. Fortunately the fair weather continued into the evening and, again, there were many wonderful costumes. Thanks to all the Evening Costume contestants for waiting patiently in the long line of fellow contestants, allowing the judges time with each one of you. And congratulations to all the costume contest winners. You all looked marvelous!

Protecting The Second Amendment

Why all Americans Should Be Concerned

*By Team Sergeant
(On behalf of 1100 Green Berets)*

We are current or former Army Reserve, National Guard, and active duty US Army Special Forces soldiers (Green Berets). We have all taken an oath to "... support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same ..." The Constitution of the United States is without a doubt the single greatest document in the history of mankind, codifying the fundamental principle of governmental power and authority being derived from and granted through the consent of the governed. Our Constitution established a system of governance that preserves, protects, and holds sacrosanct the individual rights and primacy of the governed as well as providing for the explicit protection of the governed from governmental tyranny and/or oppression. We have witnessed the insidious and iniquitous effects of tyranny and oppression on people all over the world. We and our forebears have embodied and personified our organizational motto, De Oppresso Liber [To Free the Oppressed], for more than a half century as we have fought, shed blood, and died in the pursuit of freedom for the oppressed.

Like you, we are also loving and caring fathers and grandfathers. Like you, we have been stunned, horrified, and angered by the tragedies of Columbine, Virginia Tech, Aurora, Fort Hood, and Sandy Hook; and like you, we are searching for solutions to the problem of gun-related crimes in our society. Many of us are educators in our second careers and have a special interest to find a solution to this problem. However, unlike much of the current vox populi reactions to this tragedy, we offer a different perspective.

First, we need to set the record straight on a few things. The current debate is over so-called "assault weapons" and high capacity magazines. The terms "assault weapon" and "assault rifle" are often confused. According to Bruce H. Kobayashi and Joseph E. Olson, writing in the Stanford Law and Policy Review, "Prior to 1989, the term 'assault weapon' did not exist in the lexicon of firearms. It is a political term [underline added for emphasis], developed by anti-gun publicists to expand the category of assault rifles."

The M4A1 carbine is a U.S. military service rifle—it is an assault rifle. The AR-15 is not an assault rifle. The "AR" in its name does not stand for "Assault Rifle"—it is the designation from the first two letters of the manufacturer's name—ArmaLite Corporation. The AR-15 is designed so it cosmetically looks like the M4A1 carbine assault rifle, but it is impossible to configure the AR-15 to be a fully automatic assault rifle. It is a single shot semi-automatic rifle that can fire between 45 and 60 rounds per minute depending on the skill of the operator. The M4A1 can fire up to 950 rounds per minute. In 1986, the federal government banned the import or manufacture of new fully automatic firearms for sale to civilians. Therefore, the sale of assault rifles are already banned or heavily restricted!

The second part of the current debate is over "high capacity magazines" capable of holding more than 10 rounds in the magazine. As experts in military weapons of all types, it is our considered opinion that reducing magazine capacity from 30 rounds to 10 rounds will only require an additional 6-8 seconds to change two empty 10 round magazines with full magazines. Would an increase of 6-8 seconds make any real difference to the outcome in a mass-shooting incident? In our opinion, it would not. Outlawing such "high capacity magazines" would, however, outlaw a class of firearms that are "in common use." As such this would be in contravention to the opinion expressed by the U.S. Supreme Court recent decisions.

Moreover, when the Federal Assault Weapons Ban became law in 1994, manufacturers began retooling to produce firearms and magazines that were compliant. One of those ban-compliant firearms was the Hi-Point 995, which was sold with ten-round magazines. In 1999, five years into the Federal Assault Weapons Ban, the Columbine High School massacre occurred. One of the perpetrators, Eric Harris, was armed with a Hi-Point 995. Undeterred by the ten-round capacity of his magazines, Harris simply brought more of them: thirteen magazines would be found in the massacre's aftermath. Harris fired 96 rounds before killing himself.

Now that we have those facts straight, in our opinion, it is too easy to conclude that the problem is guns and that the solution to the problem is more and stricter gun control laws. For politicians, it is politically expedient to take that position and pass more gun control laws and then claim to constituents that they have done the right thing in the interest of protecting our children. Who can argue with that? Of course we all want to find a solution. But, is the problem really guns? Would increasing gun regulation solve the problem? Did we outlaw cars to combat drunk driving?

What can we learn from experiences with this issue elsewhere? We cite the experience in Great Britain. Despite the absence of a "gun culture," Great Britain, with one-fifth the population of the U.S., has experienced mass shootings that are eerily similar to those we have experienced in recent years. In 1987 a lone gunman killed 18 people in Hungerford. What followed was the Firearms Act of 1988 making registration mandatory and banning semi-automatic guns and pump-action shotguns. Despite this ban, on March 13, 1996 a disturbed

43-year old former scout leader, Thomas Hamilton, murdered 16 school children aged five and six and a teacher at a primary school in Dunblane, Scotland. Within a year and a half the Firearms Act was amended to ban all private ownership of handguns. After both shootings there were amnesty periods resulting in the surrender of thousands of firearms and ammunition. Despite having the toughest gun control laws in the world, gun related crimes increased in 2003 by 35% over the previous year with firearms used in 9,974 recorded crimes in the preceding 12 months. Gun related homicides were up 32% over the same period. Overall, gun related crime had increased 65% since the Dunblane massacre and implementation of the toughest gun control laws in the developed world. In contrast, in 2009 (5 years after the Federal Assault Weapons Ban expired) total firearm related homicides in the U.S. declined by 9% from the 2005 high (Source: "FBI Uniform Crime Reporting Master File, Table 310, Murder Victims – Circumstances and Weapons Used or Cause of Death: 2000 – 2009").

Are there unintended consequences to stricter gun control laws and the politically expedient path that we have started down?

In a recent op-ed piece in the San Francisco Chronicle, Brett Joshpe stated, "Gun advocates will be hard-pressed to explain why the average American citizen needs an assault weapon with a high-capacity magazine other than for recreational purposes." We agree with Kevin D. Williamson (National Review Online, December 28, 2012): "The problem with this argument is there is no legitimate exception to the Second Amendment right that excludes military-style weapons, because military-style weapons are precisely what the Second Amendment guarantees our right to keep and bear."

The purpose of the Second Amendment is to secure our ability to oppose enemies foreign and domestic, a guarantee against disorder and tyranny. Consider the words of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Story: "The importance of this article will scarcely be doubted by any persons who have duly reflected upon the subject. The militia is the natural defense of a free country against sudden foreign invasions, domestic insurrections, and domestic usurpations of power by rulers. It is against sound policy for a free people to keep up large military establishments and standing armies in time of peace, both from the enormous expenses, with which they are attended, and the facile means, which they afford to ambitious and unprincipled rulers, to subvert the government, or trample upon the rights of the people. The right of the citizens to keep and bear arms has justly been considered, as the palladium of the liberties of a republic; since it offers a strong moral check against the usurpation and arbitrary power of rulers; and will generally, even if these are successful in the first instance, enable the people to resist and triumph over them."

The Second Amendment has been ruled to specifically extend to firearms "in common use" by the military by the U.S. Supreme Court ruling in U.S. v Miller (1939). In Printz v U.S. (1997) Justice Thomas wrote: "In Miller we determined the Second Amendment did not guarantee a citizen's right to possess a sawed-off shotgun because that weapon had not been shown to be "ordinary military equipment" that could "contribute to the common defense."

A citizen's right to keep and bear arms for personal defense unconnected with service in a militia has been reaffirmed in the U.S. Supreme Court decision (District of Columbia, et al. v Heller, 2008). The Court Justice Scalia wrote in the majority opinion: "The Second Amendment protects an individual right to possess a firearm unconnected with service in a militia, and to use that arm for traditionally lawful purposes, such as self-defense within the home ..." Justice Scalia went on to define a militia as "... comprised all males physically capable of acting in concert for the common defense ..."

"The Anti-Federalists feared the Federal Government would disarm the people in order to disable this citizens' militia, enabling a politicized standing army or a select militia to rule. The response was to deny Congress power to abridge the ancient right of individuals to keep and bear arms, so the ideal of a citizens' militia would be preserved." he explained.

On September 13, 1994, the Federal Assault Weapons Ban went into effect. A Washington Post editorial published two days later was candid about the ban's real purpose: "[N]o one should have any illusions about what was accomplished [by the ban]. Assault weapons play a part in only a small percentage of crime. The provision is mainly symbolic; its virtue will be if it turns out to be, as hoped, a stepping stone to broader gun control."

In a challenge to the authority of the Federal government to require State and Local Law Enforcement to enforce Federal Law (Printz v United States) the U.S. Supreme Court rendered a decision in 1997. For the majority opinion Justice Scalia wrote: "... this Court never has sanctioned explicitly a federal command to the States to promulgate and enforce laws and regulations. When we were at last confronted squarely with a federal statute that unambiguously required the States to enact or administer a federal regulatory program, our decision should have come as no surprise ... It is an essential attribute of the States' retained sovereignty that they remain independent and autonomous within their proper sphere of authority."

So why should non-gun owners, a majority of Americans, care about maintaining the 2nd Amendment right for citizens to bear arms of any kind?

The answer is "The Battle of Athens, TN." The Cantrell family had controlled the economy and politics of McMinn County, Tennessee since the 1930s. Paul Cantrell had been Sheriff from 1936-1940 and in 1942 was elected to the State Senate. His chief deputy, Paul Mansfield, was subsequently elected to two terms as Sheriff. In 1946 returning WWII veterans put up a popular candidate for Sheriff. On August 1 Sheriff Mansfield and 200 "deputies" stormed the post office polling place to take control of the ballot boxes wounding an objecting observer in the process. The veterans bearing military style weapons, laid siege to the Sheriff's office demanding return of the ballot boxes for public counting of the votes as prescribed in Tennessee law. After exchange of gunfire and blowing open the locked doors, the veterans secured the ballot boxes thereby protecting the integrity of the election. And this is precisely why all Americans should be concerned about protecting all of our right to keep and bear arms as guaranteed by the Second Amendment!

Throughout history, disarming the populace has always preceded tyrants' accession of power. Hitler, Stalin, and Mao all disarmed their citizens prior to installing their murderous regimes. At the beginning of our own nation's revolution, one of the first moves made by the British government was an attempt to disarm our citizens. When our Founding Fathers ensured the 2nd Amendment was made a part of our Constitution, they were not just wasting ink. They were acting to ensure our present security was never forcibly endangered by tyrants, foreign or domestic.

If there is a staggering legal precedent to protect our 2nd Amendment right to keep and bear arms, and if stricter gun control laws are not likely to reduce gun related crime, why are we having this debate? Other than making us and our elected representatives feel better because we think we are doing something to protect our children,

Becoming IKE McLAURY

By Ike McLaury, SASS #41845

My entry into the world of SASS was a long time ago, and I still remember that day. A friend of mine called me up and asked if I wanted to go shooting with him, and of course, I said, "heck yah." The next day bright and early he was at my front door dressed up like some cowboy out west, and I looked at him kind of funny, so he began to explain as we drove to this shooting range. As we arrived, I was curious to why he was dressed up "cowboy looking," to shoot at this regular looking firing range, but we drove down this dirt road some distance past the range in the back, and pulled onto the grass to park.

As I got out the truck, I saw other men and women dressed like western cowboys and cowgirls, carrying shotguns, rifles, and wearing these holsters with six-guns, pulling these strange looking carts around and all heading to a covered pavilion. As I followed my friend, everyone said hello to me and asked me if I was a new member or could they show me some of their guns, and I was amazed at how friendly and courteous they were.

Before we got inside the pavilion, everyone stopped before the flagpole, and a cowboy led the uncovered assembly in the Pledge of Allegiance, and an American Flag was raised. That impressed me a lot as I am a Vietnam Veteran (1969-1975). Next everyone went inside and a cowboy started talking about SASS and changes being implemented and shooting rules, which were to be followed. Then he started describing "stages", which I didn't quite understand yet, but got the gist of it. After the address, he yelled out, "lets go do some shooting and have some fun," at which time everyone left and walked over to where some frontier looking facades were erected.

When I looked through some of the partial buildings, I could see some metal targets downrange from them and really not far in distance. One of the cowboys started to explain the process of shooting, rules of safety, and why the targets were actually close.

Being a Master NRA Class shooter, a certified NRA Firearms Instructor, and a full time Police Officer and Instructor, I was familiar with firearms, but the single action revolvers, the "dog-eared" shotgun, and the lever action rifles were strange to me.

After the stage was completed by some really fast shooting cowboys and cowgirls, one of the cowboys offered to lend me his single action Colts to shoot at some of the targets to "sorta get the feel of er" as I was told. Let me tell you now, after firing my first round and hitting the target should you ask, I was hooked like a fish on a line; oh man, help me 'cuz I so want to be in this. This is FUN. My buddy came up and gave me his rifle to shoot, and I hit the targets one by one slowly getting used to the lever action and amazed at how easy it was to shoot and hardly any kick. He told me they use special "cowboy ammo," which is a lighter load and only lead bullets. As an ammunition reloader, and a certified gunsmith, my mind was in high gear thinking of ways to make bullets, obtain lead, and get some GUNS.

When we got back to the truck to go home, I had a million questions for him and started asking them like a machine gun, and true to the nature of the new "cowboy way," he started answering them one by one. Upon arrival home, I found out his wife is also a SASS member and shoots, too. WOW, can this get any better?

Within a few days I had gone to the Salvation Army and got some pants, made my own shirt out of a cowboy-looking shirt, had boots already, and ordered a pair of six-shooters. My next time at the cowboy shoot with my friend and his wife was a little different as I now looked a little like a cowboy, was loaned some guns to shoot with, saw how it's not as easy as I thought to shoot all the stages "clean" and in good time. But I was so hooked I didn't really care about the time. As a Master Class Shooter in the NRA, I was more interested in shooting all my targets with clean hits and worry about the time later. THIS IS SO MUCH FUN.

When my guns arrived, I was ready to go shooting that day, but had to wait, bummer! My alias was already made and given to SASS, after much time spent on the phone with the nice people there checking to see if my choice was taken or not. IKE McLAURY (a combination of two outlaws), SASS #41845, was born.

A year later I was a fully fledged member of the Louisiana "Bayou Bounty Hunters Posse" and later transferred to the "Deadwood Marshals," due to the growth of the chapter, which had expanded so fast it was hard to get some good shooting time since so many members were shooting.

Two years later I appeared dressed as Curly Bill Brocius, exactly down to the black handled crossed belt Colts and hat, sash, and all, carrying an 1866 Yellowboy rifle, a Henry rifle, a stagecoach shotgun, spurs, and walking and talking cowboy.

Unfortunately, as a certified firearms instructor, and a retired police officer with 30 years behind me, I took a job in the Philippines teaching weapons handling to future military and police college seniors. I say, unfortunately, as no guns are allowed to be owned by foreigners here, so I could not bring in my guns. I am so sad with not being able to play cowboy here. This is virgin territory for SASS, as no one knows what SASS is about. I have received some material from SASS to try and start a chapter here, but with no guns allowed by foreigners, it is really hard. They have lots of ranges here, and most Philippine citizens own guns, some dating back to WWII, or earlier. They also shoot ISPC here, and I have checked with some welders who already have plans in the works for some metal targets, SASS style.

What I really need is to play cowboy again. I had to leave my guns with a friend, and I miss the feel of the strap kicking into my palm, the smell of gunsmoke, the "ding" of the bullet hitting the target, and the joy of shooting my "irons" with some cowboys in the "cowboy way" ... please feel free to contact me as I live here now, at my email ... Would really like some help getting SASS to the Philippines as they have some good shooters here.

THE COWBOY WAY

By Stumpman, SASS #89993

When I consider the phrase, “The Cowboy Way,” it conjures up a thought process of the highest standards. It is a reflection of the folks that represent Cowboy Action Shooting™, honest and sincere folks eager to lend a helping hand and assist fellow shooters. Folks who volunteer their time to make shooting a success and shooters enjoying friendly competition with friends and family. The Cowboy Way describes good sportsmanship and defines “the Spirit of the Game.”

Let’s take a few moments to see exactly how our organization describes “the Spirit of the Game.” From the SASS Range Officers Basic Safety Course, Good sportsmanship defines “the Spirit of the Game.” When designing and running a match, every match Director and Range Officer must keep in mind the event is solely for the safe enjoyment of the shooters. Range Officers must be professional, polite, and friendly. The SASS Shooters Handbook is to be followed in designing a match, and SASS rules enforced equally and consistently. Skipping down the page of the SASS Range Operations Basic Safety Course, Spirit of the Game, “Because our goal is to provide a safe and fun shooting experience, any competitor or Range Officer who uses foul language or becomes belligerent or threatening in any manner will be disqualified from the event, and, at the Match Director’s discretion, may be required to leave the range.”

This sport requires a certain amount of financial investment for even the newest and basic of our shooters. By the time a shooter is committed to the sport, they can have thousands of dollars invested. Some travel great distances to participate. Others invest their time. Landowners invest in clubs and clubs invest in stages, targets, and everything else that goes into making our sport what it is today.

Competition can be made to be as serious or as fun as a shooter wants to make it. As shooters hone their skills, some become much more serious about shooting.

Some matches require a lot of effort and hard work and can be very trying to those who take on roles to support large or even small shoots. Emotions can run high. So often it is hard to make calls against a fellow shooter, like an accidental sweep at the unloading table, or a shot shell left in a shotgun not noticed at the firing line, or any other infraction. But the one thing we cannot afford to ignore is unsportsman like conduct.

It seems professional athletics has given way to arrogant, self centered, egotistical, over paid showoffs whose only goal is self serving. The example set by these so-called athletes is shameful and certainly not one we should accept or set for younger athletes. Sometimes the desire to win overcomes a lot of us. We lose sight of the fact that at the end of the day the Cadillac goes to Tiger Woods at the Masters Golf Tournament and not to the best Frontier Cartridge Duelist. We have allowed ourselves into thinking it’s my way or the highway. We may become arrogant in interpreting the rules, and we fail at “doing onto others as we would have them do onto us.” Sometimes we take things a little too far, and let our anger get the better of us.

When a person becomes angered to the point of being out of control, it’s time to step back, pull away, and collect oneself before openly expressing anger. There is no place whatsoever in any shooting sport where angry belligerent behavior should be considered tolerable or allowed to go on without that person being held accountable. Sometimes it may require asking the offender to leave, and if the behavior continues or is repeated at the next event, be disallowed from shooting. An outburst will effectively shut down a stage or shoot and adversely affects other shooters. This is un-fair to those who are simply there to enjoy themselves and the sport they love so much. It further sends a bad signal to those spectators who are there to cheer on their family member or favorite shooter and leaves a poor impression of our sport.

So remember, we are all ambassadors for our sport. With today’s focus on guns and gun owners, we cannot afford to have the wrong person see us acting in anything other than a professional, courteous, and safe manner. This sport is for enjoyment, not to receive expensive prizes. If you wake up on the wrong side of the bed, stay at home and come shoot next time. If you have received a bad call, let it go, you will get one in your favor later on that will balance things out. Don’t argue; simply state your point, and the issue will get worked out. Be kind to fellow shooters; compliment them on their costumes and shooting skills. Understand the RO is doing his best to help you shoot clean as they assist you through the shooting sequence, and that they will make mistakes; it’s human nature. Most of all have fun, laugh, and enjoy. Someday our future generations may only be able to read about us in the history books. 🤠

Return to SILVERADO

By Bumblebee Rose, SASS Life #20189

February 16 – 17, 2013

Posse up and let's get to shooting!

The Gold Coast Gunfight Committee

Sunrise, FL – There are matches that come and go with great experiences by all. The Gold Coast Gunslingers in their town of Burritoville have just finished a two-day shoot that will not only be memorable for the shooting, but the really different weather that came along with this event. On Friday night the tradition is to set-up for the match on the Broward County Sheriff's range with all the facades, targets, and vendors in place for the early arrival of club members, volunteers, and shooters.

Shoot'em up

As always this time of year our beautiful sunny weather was less than bright. We had the liquid variety of sunshine, and we all enjoyed the nice "refreshing" challenge. With the help of some great club members and great "out-of-towners," Shenandoah Bandit, SASS #84891, and Cheyenne Culpepper, SASS Life #32827, five stages were set for the Saturday morning start. Our brave vendors arrived and began setting up their baubles and wares in assigned areas valiantly keeping their merchandise dry. With everything as ready as possible and fingers crossed, many of the club members at the set-up journeyed damp, but in good spirits, to our favorite chuck wagon for a well deserved meal.

Saturday dawned a little gray and overcast, but within no time the glorious Florida sunshine broke through and there was a beautiful day to begin the opening ceremonies, welcoming all present to The Return to "Silverado" by club President George W. McLintock, SASS #79645, and introducing the four costumed student volunteers from Nova Southeast High School who helped all the committee members by performing Waddie duties. G. W. then introduced Match Director, Sterling Gentry, SASS #46289, who conducted the safety meeting, explained the range rules, led the Pledge of Allegiance, and ended with a resounding "Yee-Haw" exclaimed by all.

The shooters in their assigned posses made their way to the corresponding five of ten stages and began re-enacting classic scenes from the memorable western film, door prizes in a random drawing. At the dinner the contestants for the costume contest were introduced and each contestant explained their costume and each character’s significance. The dinner participants were given ballots to vote on the most popular costume to be announced during the awards presentation. As well as most popular, there was judging for the Best Shooting Costumes during this first day’s shooting with the winner being announced at the awards presentation. At the close of the dinner the satisfied and exhausted cowgirls and cowboys made their way home to recuperate for the second day of the match.

The second day of the shoot arrived to “sunny and hot,” South Florida with the temperatures in the high 40s with a really “nice” and cold strong breeze blowing through the range. The brave shooters, “Cowboyed-up,” and fortified with warm dusters and coats, along with the help of Cappy’s Foods that provided a great breakfast selection, lots of hot coffee, and varied selection of lunches so no one was left hungry, began the shooting.

The stages 6-10 continued the story of “Silverado” with Jake and Emmett making it to Silverado. After meeting their sister, Paden takes a job at the Midnight Star, meets Stella, and Cobb the owner, who is from his past. Mal finds his family home burned and leaves to find who did this. The son of the man Emmett killed is determined to kill the brothers for revenge and tells Cobb, “it’s time you earn your pay.” At this Cobb and his deputies set out to do their dirty work. and Wapello Bob, SASS #90875, was the lucky cowboy. Club member Irishman, SASS #83206, negotiated the donation of a Taurus Mfg. Ranch Hand, which was auctioned to the highest bidder, Lady Lilly O'Valley, SASS #79646, with the proceeds donated to the SASS Scholarship Fund.

The awards presentation began with G. W. McLintock, and Miss Conduct, SASS #26253, club Vice-President and awards designer, handing out the unique category awards. Doc Headcase, SASS #83710, was presented with the "Middle of the Road" trophy for shooting "smack dab" in the middle of all the shooters. There were five clean shooters: Amadeulist, SASS #28092, Arkansas Kitten, SASS #144; L. Topay, SASS #29327, Marshal Grizzly, SASS #23468, and Velvet Sheath, SASS #21327. Each received a "Clean Shoot" token and the all important bragging rights for a job well done.

Sidekick Chick, SASS #73141, announced a tie for Costume Contest winners, with Bobby Concho, SASS #48742, and Sterling Gentry, SASS #46289, each receiving a trophy and Capt D, SASS #21385, was

G. W. thanked our fifteen sponsors for their support as well as shooters, waddies, club members, and volunteers for all their help.

With the help of some great club members and great "out-of-towners," Shenandoah Bandit and Cheyenne Culpepper, the props, facades and targets were dismantled and stored and the gates were locked to conclude another great shoot and year for the club. The tired and beleaguered shooters made their way to a local watering hole to get a much-needed meal and to prepare their return to modern day life. Come join the Gold Coast Gunslingers in 2014 for another exciting match. 🤠

SOUTH CAROLINA STATE CHAMPIONSHIPS

MANSE'S REVENGE

Greenville, SC - When Confederate cavalry scout and South Carolina native, Manse Jolly, learned that five of six brothers had been killed in the war, he swore revenge. He vowed to kill five Yankees for each brother who died. In 1865 and 1866, Manse and his cohorts killed at least 50 and maybe as many as 100 Union troops, mostly from the 1st Maine, 33rd Regiment who were garrisoned in Anderson County, South Carolina.

The 6' 4" red head's final ride could have been right out of Josey Wales. In late 1866 or early 1867, Manse rode his horse, Dixie, down Anderson's Fant Street through the Yankee camp. He yelled and screamed at the top of his lungs, firing pistols in each hand. So startled by the rebel yell, the Union troops thought they were under attack. Jolly escaped from his Union pursuers and left Anderson County for good. He made his way to Texas, where he established a new life.

In March 2013, about 30 miles from Manse Jolly's home, the Greenville Gunfighters of the Greenville Gun Club hosted their

Of course, we could not have pulled it off without the help of our sponsors and vendors. Dewey's Pawn Shop and Jackson's Western Wear were the key main match sponsors again this year, but a long list of sponsors and vendors supported individual stages and events. less than ten seconds!

On Friday afternoon, once the main match had completed the first five stages, a couple's competition was held. Men and ladies teamed up for a head to head match that added some excitement to the afternoon. Knot Hardly Dunn and Shamrock Sadie took the prize!

The weather forecast looked really threatening for Saturday and Sunday, but we made it through Saturday before the rain arrived. Shot all five stages and then quickly made some adjustments to the schedule. Typically we have a top shooters shoot off on Sunday morning after the awards, but with the rain forecast we changed our plans. Instead of a top shooters shoot off, we let anyone who wanted to shoot enter the shoot off. Of course the top shooters entered anyway, but a few others gave it a shot and had fun doing it. Roughneck Rod and Miss Jewel took the honors.

Because we cancelled the Sunday activities due to weather, we Dun Gamblin finished first in Traditional, and Sue Render finished first in Ladies Modern.

The main match started on Friday morning with posses paired so that at each shooting bay there were two Posse Marshalls and two groups. One posse shot while the other worked, and then they switched roles. This works well and frees shooters to concentrate on shooting when their posse is competing.

Posses shot ten stages with a variety of scenarios. There were some gunfighter friendly stages, some split pistol stages, some stand and deliver stages, and a few with real movement.

Everyone found something to like. Props included store fronts and wagons, and even a stage that required a ninety degree turn to the right! Targets ranged from small knock-down circles to huge pigs and buffaloes - which can be missed, I promise.

A special team stage gave our posse members a chance to compete as a group. Each posse had a vertical two x four board assigned to them near stage ten. At the beep, everyone opened up with their rifles and split the board as fast as possible! If you've never tried it, it's loads of fun. The winning team split it in Thursday side matches included a four stage Black Powder match, a four stage Wild Bunch match, pocket pistols, derringers, and the usual speed rifle, pistol, and shotgun. Early participants were also given a chance to shoot warm-up stages to get their equipment and minds ready for the main match.

In the Black Powder match, Fast Eddie finished first overall and first in Frontier Cartridge. Doc Duncan finished first in Frontiersman. For Wild Bunch, Hondo Jackson finished first in Modern,

SMOKE IN THE WOODS

SASS MIDEAST TERRITORIAL Black Powder Championship

By Col. (Ret) Fletch O'Dubois III, SASS #14224

Middletown, OH – Smoke in The Woods 2013 was a great match! The inaugural Smoke in the Woods Indiana-Ohio State Championship grew into an annual Territorial shoot several years ago, and this year's "smoke up" continued a long succession of top-notch SASS events. Many shooters from around the country gathered at the Middletown Sportsman's Club in Middletown, OH. There were many experienced blackpowder shooters who have been shooting "The Dark Side" for a quite a while and some novice shooters giving it a try for the first time.

The weather broke cool on day one with temps in the 50s and a slight breeze, perfect for blackpowder shooters. And, it remained beautiful throughout the entire weekend. Cowboys and cowgirls assembled on the hill near stage eight for the traditional opening ceremonies. Deadwood Stan, President of The Big Irons, welcomed all the shooters. Lassiter gave the safety briefing and range instructions, and they were off. A special note of appreciation must be given to 7 Mile Tom for his outstanding work in developing the shooters' handbook.

The twelve stages were well written with enough movement for everyone, and some required a bit of thought about the best plan of action. Seven stages were shot on Saturday and the rest on Sunday. Each stage was designed for maximum fun. At stage eight, the Big Irons Corral, there were four tables, two outside the entry way to the corral and two inside the entry way. The shotgun was staged on either center table and the shooter stood behind either end table with revolvers holstered and rifle in hand with muzzle touching the tabletop. When the shooter was ready, the call to action was, "Who's that man in black?" At the beep, the shooter engaged each of the five targets twice. Then the shooter moved swiftly to the outside table, and with the first five revolver rounds swept the targets from either end. Then, they had to move to the other end position and sweep the targets from either end, and finally get the shotgun and engage two shotgun targets from at least two positions. It was quick, fun, and gave the shooters some options as to how they preferred to complete the stage. The Indy Kid, shooting Senior, managed to shoot this one in 24.97 seconds! Speaking of the Indy Kid, he was the fastest shooter on four of the 12 stages.

The fastest stage was stage two. Stage two had a box in the middle with a horse mock up several feet away on either side of it. There were three rifle targets, three revolver targets, and four shotgun targets. The shooter staged the shotgun on either one of the horses with the rifle on the opposite horse. Standing behind the box with revolvers holstered and hands touching the box, the shooter exclaimed, "He has a black heart!" At the beep, the shooter engaged the rifle first in a 1-3-1 pattern, then got the shotgun and engaged the four shotgun targets in any order, and finally with the revolver, engaged the first five targets in a 1-3-1 pattern to be followed with the same pattern with the second revolver. Zip=Zap=Zowey, this was quick! Two Bit Drifter got this one under his belt in 18.08 seconds! The fastest lady was Clementine Valentine shooting Lady Gunfighter at 27.34! Spotters had to be on their toes or they could have missed the whole shebang!

Hospitality abounded during the entire match. Lassiter had questioned folks in the morning about what pizza toppings they liked. No one knew what he had in mind at the time. When folks arrived at the Middletown Sportsman's Club clubhouse after the shoot, they were handed a whole large pizza. He had coordinated the Saturday evening dinner and pizzas to be delivered for all. He and Miss Bonnie also provided ice cream for dessert.

Sunday continued the previous day's pattern with warmer temperatures and a light breeze—no rain in the forecast. Miss Bonnie had the previous day's scores posted at the entrance to the stages for everyone to peruse. This year continued the tradition of shooting a full seven stages on the first day. This afforded competitors and their families the opportunity to be finished shooting early in the day. The remaining five stages were held on day two so it was easier to attend the awards ceremony and still have time to get home at a relatively decent hour.

On Sunday the competition was over by noon, the scores were tallied, and the awards were presented. The low score of 271.95 was posted by the Indy Kid shooting Senior, and hot on his heels was Two Bit Drifter shooting 49'er with a score of 288.26. Top Lady was Clementine Valentine shooting Lady Gunfighter at 465.04, and our Young Gun Boy, Possum Slayer in 737.86. Seven shooters, Buffalo Dick, Deadwood Stan, Loco Lead-slinger, Longshot Ace (second year in a row), Moonwaltz, Ole Rattlesnake, and Wilbur Green Rexroat were actually able to shoot the match clean!

It was great to have Young Gun Possum Slayer join in the fun this year. I was fortunate to shoot on a posse with him at the Guns of August a while back, and can this young guy shoot! His time of 39.71 on stage nine put a lot of "Old Timers" to shame. It was great to see our younger shooter, having so much fun.

What a shoot! To a person, all agreed it was again the hospitality of the Middletown Sportsman's Club and Big Irons staff and the Smoke in the Woods stage designs that made this a very memorable event. They plan to spread the word about shooting with the "dark-siders" to have even more of their friends and neighbors come next year. Nestled in the rolling foothills between Dayton and Cincinnati, the Middletown Sportsman's Club is the ideal shooting venue for Cowboy Action Shooting™, particularly for those who love to shoot blackpowder. And, the Middletown staff had everything under control. The campground was ready for those setting up their motor homes, trailers, and campers. They were housed close to the clubhouse with full bathrooms and showers.

Smoke in the Woods ...

The complete match results are posted at the Big Irons (www.BigIron.com), as well as the SASS website. Start planning to join in all the fun next year and be sure to circle this event on your calendars.

Another event you need to be aware of is The Guns of August, conducted annually the second week of August on the grounds of the Middletown Sportsman's Club, 6943 Michael Rd, Middletown OH 45402 (5113-422-5112 or fax 513-422-6113). This year will be the sixteenth anniversary of this event, and it promises to be bigger and better than any before. The Middletown Sportsman's Club is so easy to get to from anywhere in the country, and now hosts two major SASS events at their wonderful shooting complex. There are two major airports in the vicinity. It is also a great area for a vacation with numerous places to go and things to see within an hour's drive.

Guns of August continues to be a premier event because of its reputation for fun, friendliness, beautiful setting, and central location. The Guns of August 2013 competition will be twelve stages shot over two days, and Cowboy Mounted Shooting will be on the venue as well. Please check out all the details in the Guns of August announcement.

Protecting The Second Amendment

these actions will have no effect and will only provide us with a false sense of security.

So, what do we believe will be effective? First, it is important we recognize this is not a gun control problem; it is a complex sociological problem. No single course of action will solve the problem. Therefore, it is our recommendation a series of diverse steps be undertaken, the implementation of which will require patience and diligence to realize an effect. These are as follows:

1. First and foremost we support our Second Amendment right in that "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

2. We support State and Local School Boards in their efforts to establish security protocols in whatever manner and form they deem necessary and adequate. One of the great strengths of our Republic is State and Local governments can be creative in solving problems. Things that work can be shared. Our point is no one knows what will work, and there is no one single solution, so let's allow the State and Local governments with the input of the citizens to make the decisions. Most recently the Cleburne Independent School District will become the first district in North Texas to consider allowing some teachers to carry concealed guns. We do not opine as to the appropriateness of this decision, but we do support their right to make this decision for themselves.

3. We recommend Assisted Outpatient Treatment (AOT) laws be passed in every State. AOT is formerly known as Involuntary Outpatient Commitment (IOC) and allows the courts to order certain individuals with mental disorders to comply with treatment while living in the community. In each of the mass shooting incidents the perpetrator was mentally unstable. We also believe people who have been adjudicated as incompetent should be simultaneously examined to determine whether they should be allowed the right to retain/purchase firearms.

4. We support the return of firearm safety programs to schools along the lines of the successful "Eddie the Eagle" program, which can be taught in schools by Peace Officers or other trained professionals.

5. Recent social psychology research clearly indicates there is a direct relationship between gratuitously violent movies/video games and desensitization to real violence and increased aggressive behavior, particularly in children and young adults (See Nicholas L. Carnagey, et al. 2007. "The effect of video game violence on physiological desensitization to real-life violence" and the references therein. Journal of Experimental Social Psychology 43:489-496). Therefore, we strongly recommend gratuitous violence in movies and video games be discouraged. War and war-like behavior should not be glorified. Hollywood and video game producers are exploiting something they know nothing about. General Sherman famously said, "War is Hell!" Leave war to the Professionals. War is not a game and should not be "sold" as entertainment to our children.

6. We support repeal of the Gun-Free School Zones Act of 1990. This may sound counter-intuitive, but it obviously isn't working. It is our opinion "Gun-Free Zones" anywhere are too tempting an environment for the mentally disturbed individual to inflict their brand of horror with little fear of interference. While governmental and non-governmental organizations, businesses, and individuals should be free to implement a Gun-Free Zone if they so choose, they should also assume Tort liability for that decision.

7. We believe border states should take responsibility for implementation of border control laws to prevent illegal shipments of firearms and drugs. Drugs have been illegal in this country for a long, long time yet the Federal Government manages to seize only an estimated 10% of this contraband at our borders. Given this dismal performance record that is misguided and inept ("Fast and Furious"), we believe border States will be far more competent at this mission.

8. This is our country; these are our rights. We believe it is time we take personal responsibility for our choices and actions rather than abdicate that responsibility to someone else under the illusion we have done something that will make us all safer. We have a responsibility to stand by our principles and act in accordance with them. Our children are watching, and they will follow the example we set.

The undersigned Quiet Professionals hereby humbly stand ever present, ever ready, and ever vigilant.

RED MOUNTAIN RENEGADES

Monthly Match A Success Despite MOTHER NATURE'S WRATH!

By Capt. Ignit'us P. LeFue, SASS #94772

Mission, British Columbia, Canada Our Cowboy Action Shooting™ club, "The Red Mountain Renegades" held their Monthly Fun Shoot Sunday, March 3, 2013. It was the first time hosting a fun shoot for Revolver Ocelot and Smokin' Sally and Mother Nature ensured it would be a "very interesting day," as the two hosts really "got their feet wet" discovering all the trials and tribulations that come with being hosts for a shoot. Following are three emails of thanks and chronicles on the events of that day.

March shoot - Thanks to everyone who helped Smokin' Sally and I at the shoot. We had some "reengineering ideas" from other shooters that greatly helped redesign our day. As the Captain said you can only imagine the looks on our faces to see what Mother Nature had dealt us, and believe us, there were many choice words going through our heads! We greatly appreciate the help and encouragement we got from many other shooters, and without them we could not have turned that sour lemonade so sweet. We are so glad this became such a memorable shoot, even if it was because of Mother Nature raging her vindictive fury. Again many thanks to everyone that came out, and thank you for all your support.

Revolver Ocelot and Smokin' Sally.

I would like to add my thanks to Revolver Ocelot and Smokin' Sally for making some great "lemonade" out of that very large "pool of lemons", also known as the "pineapple express" that hit us hard heading into the weekend. Can you imagine, you spent weeks thinking about the shoot, devising and writing scenarios, conceptualizing target placement and staging, and then comes the day of the shoot, and wham Mother Nature says, "Surprise!" Can you visualize the look of horror on their faces when they showed up Sunday morning to set-up their carefully planned stages only to find all of Bay 1 and most of Bay 2 full of water! And we are not talking about a few large puddles here. Seriously, the entire area of Bay 1 was many inches deep in water, easily knee-deep in the target area; the pool covered the loading shed and entire observation area and walkways. In fact, the water level was about 5 to 6 inches above the boardwalk that usually serves as the firing line. And Bay 2 was only marginally better with about 80% of the target area covered in water that also looked to be knee-deep, and there was a smaller pond about 2 to 3 inches deep at the loading shed, such that two tables had to be set-up on the main walkway for loading and unloading.

Only Bay 3 was in good shape, so our intrepid organizers had to do some crisis editing to compress their vision down to 2 stages, to adjust the target selection and layout to ensure that the dry surface of Bay 3 was used to its full advantage. In Bay 2, they had to throw out the original plan, and just set up what they could around the pond. They walked along the side berms to set up rifle targets on the far berm. They then waded a little ways into the pond to set up the pistol targets. The shotgun paddles were a problem because the pond started about 6 to 8 feet from the firing line; however, they figured out that if they placed the paddles at the pond's edge, and then shot at them in a diagonal manner from the end doorway, there would be enough distance to satisfy safety concerns. It was a big challenge, but they pulled it off.

It turned out to be a great day with no rain and mostly sunny skies as we shot three stages in each bay. I really enjoyed trying for "shotgun doubles" in Bay 2, as the four paddles were set up to allow the possibility of two doubles, or a "double-double, a Timmy, or a Tim Horton's", as I started to call them. One big advantage of shooting in Bay 2 was it was easy to see the pistol misses as the bullets hit the water with a "Zing" as they shot a jet of water into the air. And in dry Bay 3, what a hoot it was to play with the "Death Star" three times, and the "Red Solo Cup" shotgun popper was a real crowd pleaser.

Everyone worked together, making adjustments and allowances for the novel shooting conditions. We all chipped in to provide guidance and assistance to the many new shooters, even those that just thought they would only be watching, but ended up having some guns slapped on them and joining the fracas. The day turned out to be a real showcase for the strong social aspect and generous helping spirit of our Cowboy Action Shooting group. You should all stand up and take a big bow.

Thanks again to Smokin' Sally and Revolver Ocelot for hosting a unique shoot that will never be forgotten.

Capt. Ignit'us P. LeFeu

Just wanted to express Georgia Bank's and my appreciation for Smokin Sally and Revolver Ocelot taking on and hosting the March shoot. They did a great job writing stages, target placement and target sequences. In a word...."OUTSTANDING!" For the folks that did not make it, you missed a great shoot. For those that were there, I have to say, you all made this a very enjoyable day. It was another day with brand new shooters and everyone did their part to show that good old cowboy generosity and kindness. New shooters find out that Cowboy Action Shooting is a lot of fun, but it's "you folks" being just so darn hospitable and generous that makes them want to come back! Thanks again to Smokin Sally and Revolver Ocelot, and everyone else for a great day!

Allentown, PA Dakota Jack Gunfighter, SASS #21579 was contacted by the promoter for the March 2-3, 2013 Lehigh Valley Sportsman Show in Allentown, PA to find out if SASS was interested in setting up a Cowboy Action Shooting display. Of course we would be interested! Set-up at the show included Chronicles along with SASS promotional literature from SASS headquarters. Gun racks for long arms were set up on tables, along with a DVD player with a large TV, and a laser shooting game provided by Tin Ear and Ragweed. This game proved to very popular with the people stopping by, especially with the Buckaroos and Buckarettes. One Buckaroo had his parents bring him back multiple times!

Our cowboy costumes seemed to be a great draw for show attendees. Visitors were non-stop with a high interest level about SASS and Cowboy Action Shooting. Total show attendance was reported at 13,000 for both days, and a three day show is scheduled for 2014.. SASS members at the show were Barley Pop Bill, SASS #53019, Calamity Jame, SASS #84825, J.S.Sooner, SASS #73526,

WILD BUNCH™ in New Mexico

Black Diamond can attest even those “new-fangled” Model 12s won’t necessarily save you! Guns are guns, and things can and will go wrong ... and when they do, it’s generally not pretty!

By Tex, SASS #4

Whether one had a 1911 or a revolver strapped to their hip, a great time was in store for everyone.

Although this was a Wild Bunch™ Team Match there were no military uniforms in evidence. A couple of the competitors, like Capt. Baylor, shown here, came dressed as Pike appeared toward the end of the Wild Bunch movie.

The Pikes shot against the Pikes, the Dutches against the Dutches, and so forth AND the teams shot against one another. Everyone received both an individual score AND a team score.

The members of each team were randomly selected preventing “put together” teams, and shooters were allowed to get in line and shoot whenever they were ready.

The stages all consisted of 20 rounds ACP, 10 rounds revolver, 10 rounds rifle, and six rounds shotgun. Those shooting the 1911s shot both the revolver targets AND the rifle targets ... otherwise one simply shot the targets appropriate for the firearms they were using. The shooters competed one at a time, just like always, but there were essentially four scenarios, one per character, for each stage. Total time scoring worked just fine for calculating individual scores AND for determining the team scores.

While none of the standard Wild Bunch™ or Cowboy Action categories were recognized, many chose to “stay true” to their chosen disciplines (cowboy gunfighters, Wild Bunch “Traditional,” and the like.) While the cowboys could often get through their portion of the stage in considerably less than 20 seconds, the 1911 shooters were often turning in scores in the low 30s.

As usual, there were lots of smiles as well as outright laughter. Cowboys were getting a taste of “real” shooting (and the use of that “bumpy” thing on the end of the barrel), and the Wild Bunch™ guys were getting to put a bunch of rounds down range. It was loads of third Sunday (one of six standard shoot days each month!).

In April, Norfleet designed a unique monthly match for the Renegades. He based the match on the Wild Bunch™ Team Event description in the Wild Bunch Shooters Handbook, which allowed everyone in the club to “play the game” even if they didn’t own a 1911 or a Model ‘97.

Each competitor signed up as either Pike (1911/Model ‘97), Dutch (SASS Revolvers/Model ‘97), Lyle (1911/SASS rifle), or Tector (SASS revolvers/SASS rifle). Model 12s were welcomed as well, and Wild

Deputy Dangit chose to use his revolvers in this match. Even though the power factors, calibers, and target distances were not the “cowboy” norm, everyone “cowboyed up” and did reasonably well. It was definitely a new experience for some of the cowboys!

Bunch™ rules applied, including big bores and power factors (for all rifles, revolvers, and pistols—if you’re going to play Wild Bunch™, play Wild Bunch™!). The big bores and power factors along with the Wild Bunch target distances were a bit unsettling for some of the cowboys who are used to shooting large, close targets with lightly loaded .38s!

The competitors were collected into four person teams consisting of a Pike, Dutch, Lyle, and a Tector and then the fun began!

One of the joys of being on the range this Sunday was the New Mexico weather ... this was arguably the nicest day so far this year—clear skies, mild temperatures, and NO WIND!

ipate and maybe entice them to make the plunge into this exciting new game!
(Editor's note—The decision was made to enforce the power factor rule for everyone competing ... this kept everything fair for everyone and offered a great introduction to the game. Since the regular Wild Bunch™ competitors were only shooting two of their three firearms, there were plenty of "extra" firearms available for loan to cowboys who didn't have the right equipment. While there was pressure to allow lightly loaded cowboy guns into this competition, afterwards the general consensus was not "wimping" and allowing .38s was the correct call.)

fun, it was a great experience, it was a successful match, and the Renegades intend to make this an annual club event. Norfleet did good and is to be congratulated!

Consider giving this a try ... it allows non-Wild Bunchers to particloan to cowboys who didn't have the right equipment. While there was pressure to allow lightly loaded cowboy guns into this competition, afterwards the general consensus was not "wimping" and allowing .38s was the correct call.)

EZ GZ continues to show determination ... and improvement in her 1911 skills. She was one of two ladies participating in the match.

SASS National Championship of Wild Bunch™ Action Shooting

By Larsen E. Pettifogger, SASS Life / Regulator #32933

Phoenix, AZ – Shooter Ready? Standby. BEEEEEP! The shooter draws his trusty six-shooter and starts to engage ... Wait a second, that's no six-gun; it is a Colt 1911 in .45 Auto! Come to think of it the shooter isn't exactly dressed in 19th Century duds either. What gives, I thought this was supposed to be a SASS match? Turns out it was a SASS match, the largest of its kind in the country, as a matter of fact. But, this wasn't a Cowboy Action Shooting™ match; it was a Wild Bunch™ match.

Wild Bunch™ was designed as a change of pace from Cowboy Action Shooting™ and for a shooting experience from a slightly different era. In Cowboy Action Shooting™ we try to replicate the look and feel of the American West in the late 19th Century. Wild Bunch™ is intended to look and feel like the early days of the 20th Century. The handgun used in Wild Bunch™ matches is the biggest difference. It is a semi-automatic rather than a wheel gun. There are some other differences that make Wild Bunch™ a bit more challenging than Cowboy Action Shooting™. For those that have shot IPSC or IDPA, you are familiar with “major” and “minor” ammunition and power factors. Multiplying the bullet weight in grains times muzzle velocity and dividing by 1000 determines the power factor. Thus, a 200-grain bullet traveling at 800 feet per second yields a power factor of 160. (200 x 800/1000 = 160.) In Cowboy Action Shooting™ the minimum power factor is only 60. In Wild Bunch™ it is a minimum of 150.

The calibers are large bore, and only the Colt 1911 (or clone) in .45 is allowed. Rifles must be at least .40 caliber. For the shotgun, only pump guns are allowed – the Winchester (and clone) Models '12 and '97 and the reproduction '93/'97.

Shooting scenarios and targets are also a little bit different. Because the power factor is much higher than that used in Cowboy Action Shooting™, it facilitates more use of reactive targets. So, at Wild Bunch™ matches you will typically see pepper poppers, knock-down racks, and dueling trees. The targets are also often placed slightly further out than in a typical Cowboy Action Shooting™ match, so you have to take more careful aim. In Cowboy Action Shooting™ shotguns are normally staged open and empty. In Wild Bunch™ the shotgun is typically staged with the magazine fully loaded with six rounds. In short, Wild Bunch™ is intended to be a large caliber/major power factor match with an emphasis on speed and accuracy.

Finally, in Cowboy Action Shooting™ most stages are 10 rifle rounds, 10 pistol rounds, and 4 rounds of shotgun. Wild Bunch™ matches are more varied in the number of rounds fired and a greater emphasis is usually placed on the pistol. Since there is only one pistol used, almost all stages require pistol reloads, and it is not unusual for 20 or more rounds to be fired out of the handgun. In keeping with the philosophy of major power and keeping equipment and

Samuel B Carpenter, SASS #34043, from Norway was the top Traditional competitor. While not generally as fast and accurate as the Modern Category, the Traditional category is extremely competitive ... and shot the way the 1911 was taught to be shot when it was first introduced!

Rifle and pistol ammo is collected from selected individuals for power factor testing. The rounds are run through “match” guns ... and any ammo that fails the tests is retested in the competitor's guns. There were no failures this year!

Winter Range 2013...

the rules as simple as possible, Wild Bunch™ also only offers four categories: Modern, Traditional, Lady Modern, and Lady Traditional.

At Winter Range the Wild Bunch™ Championship takes place on Monday and Tuesday (the Cowboy Action Shooting™ match starts on Thursday) and the Wild Bunch™ shooters had two beautiful 70-degree days for the match. Wild Bunch™ stages are typically longer and more complex than Cowboy Action Shooting™ stages. Thus, the Wild Bunch™ National Championship is limited to 125 shooters and ten stages in order to finish each day at a reasonable hour.

The stages presented the shooters with a wide variety of scenarios and varied greatly in the number of rounds fired from each gun. In fact, one stage was shot entirely with the handgun. Wild Bunch™ has evolved a lot the past two or three years, and the shooters have also become use to the Wild Bunch™ rules and shooting style. The stage writers have learned what the majority of shooters like and can, because of the increased power factor, continue to keep things entertaining with plenty of challenging scenarios and reactive targets.

Many returning shooters ac-knowledgeed there is a learning curve with Wild Bunch™ and there were far fewer penalties this year than in past National Championships. Shooters have learned that the 150 power factor applies to their pistol ammo AND their rifle ammo. So, for 2013 no one failed the ammo chronograph test. Everyone's pistols and magazines were also weighed to make sure they didn't violate the weight limits set forth in the Wild Bunch™ rules.

This year the stage writer's goal was to write stages that would be the most fun for the most shooters. Some stages were written to be close and fast, others required more accuracy, and a lot of reactive targets were used. The basic philosophy for the match stages was power and accuracy and a happy medium seems to have been struck. There was even a clean match for the first time in three years! Pretty much all the shooters agreed the stage writer's goal was met. There was a little bit of everything in the way of shooting scenarios for the shooters and the stages were very shooter friendly.

One of the things that caught a few shooters off-guard were the peculiarities of shooting the Winchester Model '12. Wild Bunch™ shotguns are usually staged with the magazines fully charged. However, the shooter is still required to TO's supervision. If the hammer goes CLICK, the shooter just bought him/herself a stage DQ. There were several at this year's National Championship. Like many things in Wild Bunch, there is a learning curve, and in the future, a stage DQ with a Model '12 should become a rare occurrence.

Wild Bunch™ continues to grow and evolve. What might be in the future? As Wild Bunch™ continues to gain popularity, it is faced with the same demographics as the rest of SASS. There are more and more senior shooters. The category system will continue to be relatively simple and the categories few in number. However, State level and above matches have the option of adding age-based subdivisions of the existing categories. (E.g., Senior Traditional, Senior Modern, etc.) Some consideration is also being given to determine if Junior categories are feasible. Wild Bunch™ is also growing in Europe, and a group from Europe will be traveling to Founder's Ranch later this year to be trained as Wild Bunch™ ROs. Finally, some thought will be given to raising the shooter numbers at the National Championships and possibly shooting twelve stages at some point in the future.

For more information on Wild Bunch™ shooting, go to the SASS homepage, go to the bottom of the page under Departments and click on the Wild Bunch™ Wire Forum. On the Wild Bunch™ forum the rules are posted, and you will find a lot of friendly folks discussing Wild Bunch™ and anxious to answer your questions about Wild Bunch™.

So, perfect weather, well-written stages, great props and targets, and a lot of people dedicated to making Wild Bunch™ a fun and exciting event made this year's Winter Range SASS National Championship of Wild Bunch™ Action Shooting a huge success! Hope to see you all at Winter Range 2014! 🤠

SASS National Championship of Cowboy MOUNTED SHOOTING and CMSA LEGENDARY GUNS SHOOT OUT

By Dan Nabbitt, SASS #5537, and Larsen E. Pettifogger, SASS #32933

Phoenix, AZ – One of the things the organizers of any large event try to do is make sure visitors have a good time. This is especially true when there are several thousand visitors, and they are milling about trying to find something to do or something fun to watch. Visitors are a source of potential new SASS members, and they make the vendors very happy. So, it pays to keep the visitors happy. Unfortunately, the props and fronts we use to enhance the shooting experience and to help provide the aura of the Old West for the shooters is a problem for visitors. They just plain can't see the action. This is one area where Mounted Shooting has an edge over what they call "the ground shooters" (Action Shooting). Mounted events take place in a big open arena, and a few well placed bleachers let the crowds see some real western action up close and Association) and SASS events to achieve a harmonious outcome for all that were involved.

Three separate one-day matches made up this year's mounted event. Riders could enjoy all or any part of this shindig! On Friday Rowdy Sue, SASS #74625, and company joined forces with the Tombstone Ghost Riders to conduct a Charity match for the Red Shirt Friday Wounded Warrior charity and the Ben Avery development fund. Seventy-four riders entered this worthy event collecting over $6,600. The Ghost Riders made a separate donation that came to a tad over $4,300. Dozens of individual donations flowed in as well! We owe our ser-personal. Because all the action takes place in the open directly in front of the spectators, mounted events rely heavily on announcers to keep everyone informed about what is going on and to keep the level of excitement high. This year's announcer was Matt Zinn, and he kept the crowd on the edge of their seats. This year's Winter Ranch mounted event was a record setter.

The mounted events start a little later in the week than Wild Bunch and the Action Shooting. When the Mounted Shooters started arriving on Wednesday there was an actual blizzard! About 1 a.m. on Sunday morning there was one of the famous Bloody Basin Cyclones!!! (Bloody Basin is the area just north of the Ben Avery Shooting Facility.) Sandwiched between the Phoenix blizzard and the Cyclone, Winter Range enjoyed its biggest and best Mounted event of all time. A total of 235 riders participated in a history-making weekend. The format changed a little for 2013 with a careful blending of CMSA (Cowboy Mounted Shooting vicemen and women everything! We can never do enough to thank the millions that have served and to provide assistance to those that have suffered service related injuries.

Zane Chunn and Sharon Little led the charge for the Friday event with some amazing ride'n and fancy (and safe) gun handle'n!

On Saturday 118 desperados toed the line for the main "Legendary Gun" shootout with 5x points and $5,000 in additional prize money added to the pot. (The Ghost Riders alone chipped in $4,000.) Because of the unprecedented number of shooters, the Saturday event had to be reduced to three stages, even with the "Balloon Bouys" automatic ballon machines. "Sheriff Bill Murphy," "New River Rider," and "Mule Girl" have developed these amazing contraptions that automatically dispense and fill new balloons at each shooting pylon. This eliminates the need to manually fill, carry, and place balloons in the arena. This dramatically speeds up the time between shooters. These gizmos are genius, plain and simple. Our hats go off to them! Even with these machines, there was barely time to get the rifle and shotgun stages done before sun down.

By the time the Mounted Shooters got to the Chili Cook-off (won by Expressman, SASS #41513) and the day's winners were acknowledged, it was 9:00 p.m. The planned square dance, prize drawing, etc. had to be deferred, as the riders were all to pooped to pop!

As previously noted, this year's mounted event was a blend of CMSA and SASS events. The big difference between CMSA and SASS mounted is CMSA rides for cash prizes. SASS Mounted Shooters, like their Action Shooter counterparts, shoot only for trophies and buckles. The format for this year's event was simple. Enter the CMSA match and run for the big bucks. Enter the SASS match for an extra $30 and run at the same time for the buckles and titles. Gary Bennett and Tammy Billingsley won the loot while Canyon Cowgirl, SASS #31074, (CO) and Bad Dog, SASS #86845, (AZ) won the SASS buckles and were declared to be the SASS 2013 Winter Range National Champions! YEEHA!

We will tweak a few things that our competitors commented on and with a few adjustments next year's event will be even bigger and better. One of the big things being considered is the possible use of two arenas simultaneously so we can spend more time enjoying the plethora of offerings that this historic event offers. The Ghost Riders Board of Directors is already working on this. If you have any constructive ideas please e-mail Dan Nabbitt at williamavery@msn.com. Each year the Mounted Shooters get a taste of live fire Action Shooting with the ALL Around Cowboy and Cowgirl competition. Again due to time constraints, this "live ammo action stage" was held on Friday after the Mounted Charity match. Thanks, Madison and your posse, for running this for the Mounted Shooters! To win the title of All Around Cowboy/Cowgirl, a shooter's Cowboy Action scores are combined with their mounted scores. This year Buck Doff, SASS

#64494, (AZ) and Mustang Momma, SASS #64495, (AZ) were crowned the SASS ALL AROUND COWBOY/COWGIRL Winter Range National Champions for 2013!

On Sunday, right after Cowboy Church, in gale force winds, 43 brave souls voted to ride anyway! Tough bunch, them Mounted Shooters! The balloon bouys proved up to the task and Tuco's Outlaw Blanks were flawless even in high winds. El Paso Bob, SASS #71572, (TX) and Tracy Reinhart, SASS #94491, (AZ) out "toughed" the rest of the competitors to win this low cost, no frills event, and end an historic month of Mounted Shooting. There had been a major match every weekend of February somewhere in the "Valley of the Sun" as shooters practiced for Winter Range! Even our Canadian iron Men and Women were starting to look a little tired by the end of the month. Never seen that before!

On behalf of the Tombstone Ghost Riders, we thank each and every one of the 235 riders for coming to Arizona and playing with us! It is an honor to serve with the Ghost Rider board, and to work with the Winter Range board and the Arizona Department of Game and Fish to provide the best possible event that we can. Y'all come back next year, ya hear? 🤠

✻ BUTTONS ✻

By Cree Vicar Dave, SASS Life / Regulator #49907

Dress pants and denim style pants also are fitted with buttons to accommodate leather suspenders. On most of my dress pants the belt loops are removed, but not on the jeans. There are metal clips offered to connect the suspenders to the belt loops, but I favor using buttons.

When I first started in Cowboy Action the Vicar's Wife found brass buttons. She would buy them for me, but connecting them to the clothing was "out of her classification." So the sewing was totally up to me. These brass buttons are just under 3/4" and worked okay, but for me, they lacked pizzazz. Upon further reconnaissance, we

Dressing to fit the Cowboy era is half the fun of Cowboy Action Shooting™ for me. If a frock coat or vest comes with plain plastic buttons they usually are refitted before they get a chance to proudly hang in my closet.

"LeBouton" silver color buttons, sizes 5/8", 3/4" (these are a little over 3/4"), and 7/8". I use the smaller 5/8" size on vests and frock coat sleeves. The mid-sized 3/4" for suspenders and vests with large buttonholes, and the larger 7/8" sized on frock coats, front & back.

Brass buttons on an old pair of bluejeans. These are a little under 3/4" in diameter and slip out of the suspender loops quite easily found silver colored "LeBouton" buttons at WAL-MART that are just over 3/4" in diameter. These look a lot nicer, as far as I'm concerned, and they don't slip out of the suspenders as easily as the smaller brass ones do.

When I first started sewing the buttons on, I used waxed linen thread. The buttons were sewed on with a dull point needle. The leather wears hard on the thread and I soon found the buttons were coming undone. It says in Isaiah 6:5a KJV, "Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone..." Not wanting to be "undone," an effort on my part was made to remedy the problem. So I started winding more thread around the thread that held the buttons onto the pants. This somewhat prolonged the time before the buttons become undone, but I continued looking for a better button backup plan.

Now I use "Tandy Leather Factory" thread. This leather thread is a lot stronger than the waxed linen thread, and I can sew more thread loops through the buttonhole. I usually tie off the thread 2 or 3 times while sewing the button on, and then wind thread around it a couple layers tying it off after each layer. To help hold it all in place clear fingernail polish is painted on.

These buttons come in three sizes that lend use to Cowboy Action clothing: 5/8", 3/4" and 7/8" diameter. The smaller size works well on shirts, vests, and frock coat sleeves. The midsized ones I use for suspenders, and the larger sized can be used on the front of frock coats.

In time, leather always wins, but it takes a lot longer now before the buttons become "undone."

A CAP GUN STORY

By Buckaroo, SASS #203

When I was six years old, (1948) I lived with my grandparents in a small town in North Dakota, and every Saturday we would go into Devil's Lake for groceries and supplies. That summer there was a set of ivory-handled, gold Roy Rogers cap guns with a fancy belt, metal bullets, and gold metal holsters in the window of Stern's Clothing. I spotted those guns and immediately wanted them. The price was $49. There was no way my grandparents could afford anything so extravagant, but I dragged them by that window every Saturday anyway. One day the cap guns were gone, and I knew some rich kid was wearing my guns.

I always remembered those guns, and about twenty years ago I was living in Arizona and met an antique dealer who dealt in cap guns. I told him about the guns, and he told me he'd look for them. Finally one day he called and said he had a lead on the guns of my dreams. "How much?" "Twelve hundred dollars." I guess some rich kid is once again wearing my cap guns. 🐾

DISPATCHES FROM CAMP BAYLOR

Testing .. Testing .. Testing

By Captain George Baylor, SASS Life / Regulator #24287

Doc Noper's Shotgun Belts

Deuce Stevens asked me to test and write about the shotgun belts of Doc Noper Leather (Gary Knoper, 10850—96th Ave., Allendale, MI 49401, H-616-892-6244, C-616-690-6722, <http://docnleather.shutterfly.com/>, docnoper@gmail.com.) Doc Noper is in Allendale Michigan, while I spend most of my time in the western desert, so I didn't know him. Deuce, however, is a champion shooter I've known and respected for several years. If he tells me something works well, I tend to pay attention. So naturally I said yes. Interestingly, though Doc Noper does a full line of Cowboy Action Shooting™ competition leather, what Deuce wanted me to test was just his shotgun belts.

That was intriguing. Deuce is a VERY fast shotgunner.

Then Doc Noper called for sizing information at an opportune time. I'd just switched from .45-70 to .38-55 for my Plainsman rifle. So I gave him an "impossible quest," a belt that would make it easy for me to grab four .38-55 rounds at a time. Plainsman is a side match using a single-shot 19th century (external hammer) rifle, percussion pistols, and double or lever action shotgun. The secret of success is to (a) hit 10 pistol targets quickly, which means making the percussion pistol work, not a small feat in itself, (b) hitting the shotgun targets quickly, and (C) (note capital letter) hitting the rifle targets quickly. In order to hit the targets quickly, you have to load it quickly. This is what usually separates the top shooters. A stage usually has 4-10 rifle targets, sometimes at normal stage distances, sometimes in the next county, depending on the match director. The rifle, like the shotgun, starts and ends empty, so speed loading it is the key to winning Plainsman. If you can pick up, say, four rounds, and load them without fumbling, you have an advantage over someone equally skilled who can only pick up one or two. Distance equals time.

So, a few weeks later three shotgun belts showed up in my size. One was what I would call a conventional belt holding 12 shotgun shells in double loops, appropriate for my double, and three .38 rounds on each side for reloads. The belt itself has a section doubled over the belt itself and stitched down. Since it is doubled on top, this makes the top thicker, and it angles the shells out on top. I noticed the belt was molded in a curve and wouldn't lay down flat for pictures. Since most of us have curved midsections, this is a good thing.

The second belt had canvas webbing shotgun loops. The third belt had all webbing loops, holding ten shotgun shells and fourteen .38-55s. The pistol loops would, of course, hold .38 Special rounds, so this could be your all-purpose belt. Per my request, the rifle loops were on the right. I'm left-handed and load with my right hand. Doc Noper Leather is a one-man shop, so getting a custom belt is easy because that's all he does. The webbing shotgun loops were hard to get rounds into, but easy to get them out of, with no sticking. They were very consistent. Additionally, they never fell out under exertion.

All of the belts work very well.

They're all sturdily made and well finished. I used the .38-55 belt extensively practicing for Plainsman at Winter Range. One of the reasons I switched to .38-55 is that the .45-70 rounds, if I grabbed too many, would "bind." With the Doc Noper belt and .38-55s, grabbing four is doable without binding. Three is easier. I practiced with this belt and an all-leather belt with 12 loops designed for .38 Special, and the Doc Noper belt won the speed contest. All of that practice went down the drain, or maybe the lack of drainage in the rain, snow, sleet, hail, and the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, all of which occurred during the Winter Range Plainsman match, which was called after one stage.

The next Plainsman match was Buffalo Stampede, which had perfect weather, and the belt served quite well. I had no difficulty loading the rifle. Do I give credit to the shotgun belt, the Johnny Meadows prepared .38-55 Buffalo Classic, or to practice? Yes. Unfortunately, the rounds do not jump out of the belt and load themselves into the rifle, aim it, and gently squeeze the trigger when it is on target. If you make a belt that will make that happen, let me know. I'll definitely write about it.

Super Powder by American Pioneer Powder

After my last chronograph/Ransom Rest test session of blackpowder percussion loads, I noted that American Pioneer Powder and Jim Shockey's Gold (by American Pioneer Powder) had higher velocity spreads than the other powders tested. Despite that, they had the smallest groups. Brett at American Pioneer Powder told me they had a powder that had extra processing and lower ES (Extreme Spread, the difference between highest and lowest velocity) and SD (Standard Deviation). It's called Super Powder, and currently it is only available in Super Sticks designed for hunters. It has a reputation for accuracy. In long range shooting consistent velocity is extremely important. It also results in hunting velocities as high as 2000 ft./sec. that flatten the trajectory considerably compared to standard blackpowder. Higher velocity is a Good Thing in hunting ammunition, all things being equal. He sent me a bottle with an American Pioneer Powder 2F label on it with "Super Powder Form" written with a Magic Marker. So you are not likely to find it at your local store just yet. Brett told me that Super Powder gets extra processing, and that is the secret of its consistency.

I set up the Ransom Rest and Oehler 35 Proof Chronograph at Albuquerque's Shooting Range Park's Hayes City, home of the Rio Grande Renegades. I set the chronograph at measured 10 ft. and the target stand at 45 feet (15 yards). Normally in SASS pistol targets are closer than that. All loads were measured with the same 30 gr. spout using the same techniques. 144 gr. .457 Speer Round balls were used. I tested Super Powder vs. American Pioneer Powder 3F and Jim Shockey's Gold in 2F and 3F. For "wholly" blackpowder, I used Goex 2F and 3F and Swiss 3F. Goex is the most popular blackpowder in SASS matches. Swiss, a premium powder known for its long-range accuracy, had given the widest groups on the previous test, so I was "giving it another chance." The results, in decreasing group size order:

- Swiss 3F: high Vel 882, low 859, ES 23, Avg Vel 873, SD 9, Power factor 126, group 5.5". This mirrors the previous test. The low SD should guarantee one-hole groups. But this isn't long-range rifle, and my Ruger Old Armies make tighter groups with other powders. I'm making no generalizations from it. However, if searching for a load for recalcitrant knockdowns or charging Buicks, I'll start with this powder and fill the cylinder as appropriate.
- Jim Shockey's Gold 3F: High 827, low 678, ES 149, Avg 738, SD 54, PF 106, Group 4". In this test Jim Shockey's Gold 3F was considerably hotter than the same load of American Pioneer Powder 3F.
- American Pioneer Powder 3F: High 570, low 491, ES 179, Avg 607, SD 68, PF 87, Group 2.875". This is the lowest recoiling load.
- Goex 3F: High 772, low 723, ES 49, Avg 754, SD 18, PF 109, group 2.5". A good all around powder.
- Super Powder 2F: High 783, Low 703, ES 79, Avg 748, SD 30, PF 108, Group 2.5". Velocity (and thus recoil) and group size are pretty much a tie with Goex 3F.
- Goex 2F: High 713, low 676, ES 37, Avg 691, SD 15, PF 100, Group 2.2". Lower recoil than Goex 3F and the lowest smoke per volume.

Three different Doc Noper Leather Shotgun belts. Top is all leather. Middle has canvas shotgun loops. Bottom has canvas shotgun loops and canvas loops for .38-55 for Plainsman matches—also fits .38 Special/.357 Magnum for main match use.

- Jim Shockey's Gold 2F: High 638, low 527, ES 111, Avg 589, SD 42, PF 85, group 1.375.

A common question I get is "I can't find American Pioneer Powder, but they have Jim Shockey's Gold. Can I use it?" Yes. Generally speaking the same volume of another blackpowder or substitute of the same granulation can be substituted. You can substitute Gold 2F for APP 3F and probably can't tell the difference. 3F is a little hotter than APP 3F, but you can still substitute it without changing your loads. I started using 3F for everything some years back because of "clumping" with 2F in my Dillon powder measures when making cartridges and shot shells. Current production 2F, however, seems to work fine in my powder measures. All of the group sizes above are acceptable. Super Powder does have less velocity spread than American Pioneer Powder or Jim Shockey's Gold. If it ever becomes available, I'll be a customer.

Revisiting SliX-Shot Nipples

When I tested SliX-Shot nipples when they first came out, the only thing I had reservations about was the fact the Ruger Old Army nipples were .040 longer than stock nipples. They worked very well, but were hard to seat the caps, especially when the guns were dirty after a few stages. If you didn't get the cap seated completely, the cylinder wouldn't rotate. So you had to stop capping and get your seating tool (a Frontiersman Screwknife, for example) and push the #10 Remington cap on, then continue capping.

The second "batch" of nipples for the Ruger Old Army are .020 longer than stock. This means the hammer will hit the nipple just before it stops on the frame. The result is easier capping and superb reliability. The nipples fit Remington #10 caps, and that's all the makers recommend. I concur. As long as I use the "new" Remington caps (green inside), I get 100% reliability and one "minor" cap jam every 1,000 rounds or so. The "old" (gold inside) Remington caps are not 100% reliable, and CCI caps are less reliable. 830825RS is the part number of the new, shorter nipples. Neither old nor the new nipples have shown any wear or peening, and the hard stainless steel hammers on the Ruger Old Armies are showing no wear. Desperado Cowboy Bullets (Desperado Cowboy Bullets, LLC, 2 Port Way, PO Box 165, Dayton, WA 99328, www.cowboybullets.com, E-mail: sales@cowboybullets.com or tech@cowboybullets.com, 1-866-4-Bullet(s) — 1-866-428-5538, or (509) 382-8926) and Long Hunter Shooting Supply (3403 SW 6th Ave., Amarillo, TX 79106 806-342-0000, www.longhunt.com) sell them.

These nipples, because of the side vent holes, allow lighter springs than stock or Treso nipples. With my arthritic thumbs I have difficulty cocking ROAs with stock springs for a full match. The pain slows me down excessively. With these nipples I can use 17# Wolff Old Vaquero springs and can continue to shoot Frontiersman for a while anyway. 🤞

BELT BUCKLES Aren't Jewellery!

By Sara Bear, SASS #77135

My house was destroyed in the 2011 Bastrop Complex Fire. We were very fortunate we had insurance and unlike many (and for reasons I still don't understand) I evacuated much of my jewelry. I didn't own a ton of gold and diamonds, but much of my jewelry was old and belonged to family members since passed. I wear it and appreciate it. The fact I still have most of it is a comfort to me. However, that being said, we had a $2500 jewelry/fur policy on our account. Once moved in our rebuilt house, I went through what I did evacuate to figure out what I lost (which isn't a nice feeling) and got my husband to figure out what he had lost, too. (He did the house contents—including a lot of guns!) We came up with about $2200 in lost items including watches, jewelry, and western style buckles ... it amazed me, but I had collected a LOT over the years and I was into making my own bead jewelry, too.

Due to our jobs, we haven't gone to many big SASS matches, so we didn't own any fancy $150+ trophy buckles, but even so, I don't consider the average $30 – $75 decorative western buckle to be “just a belt;” they are detachable pieces of art (one even had moving parts!). I submitted the claim, and found to my disgust ALL vintage jewelry was devalued up to 80% (“we consider jewelry to have a 15 year lifespan”), and ANY sort of buckle DID NOT COUNT as jewelry. Neither do fancy elaborate handmade barrettes: I lost several of those at $20 – $30+ a pop. We got back about half of what I asked for. A solid gold chain and St. Christopher that my husband had owned since a child was devalued to less than the market value of the gold it was made of. I'll get the money back, if I go ahead and buy the items before the two-year anniversary of the fire.

Jewelry isn't high on my list of stuff to buy right now ... we've been buying tools and other household items. My husband is finally putting together his new reloading setup—that just had to wait for other things. I've bought a few odds and ends as I find them, but if they are on sale, you only get up to that amount, not the original item price. I've got some jewelry shopping to do this summer. But it's not really fun when you HAVE to go buy the stuff.

I strongly recommend you learn from our experience and find out from your insurance company just how they will treat these elaborate buckles, and all the rest of your stuff BEFORE this happens to you. I truly hope it never does. Chances are they will classify western buckles (and all your gun leather) in with the $20 cheapo belt you got from Wallyworld ... that is, part of your overall house contents.

If you are anything like us, you never realize just how much stuff you really have until you have to replace ALL of it ... “every Q tip,” as my husband said to someone. We should have had much more insurance than we had. Again, in our policy, contents works the same way—devalued—you have to go out and buy new stuff for the same price and submit receipts before you'll get all the $$ back ... all within their timeframe. Some of that obviously is not stuff that's as critical as say, having a fridge, or parts for your car. We have seen exceptional generosity in those who came to our aid and poured donations into our little area, so I am not in any way trying to sound ungrateful—I have bought hardly any clothes as I don't frankly care what is “in fashion” right now—I still have a wardrobe full of clothes! But, this isn't the point.

I'm pointing out that something that SHOULD be classed as jewelry isn't, so maybe you'd better find out now and maybe up the homeowner's policy. Maybe even do like we are thinking of doing (given the hoops we are being forced to jump through) and put some money aside every month instead of paying for the extra premium for the jewelry in a hard-to-access account to use only if something bad happens. That way it stays YOUR money the whole time. I hope to goodness none of this ever happens for anyone, but if I may suggest it, keep those trophy buckles in a safe deposit box at the bank! 🐾

GRAVER BILL'S BITS

Graver Bill, SASS #62191

By Graver Bill, SASS #62191

Let me start by introducing myself, I am Graver Bill, SASS #62191, and I have been competing in all types of shooting for 35 years. Cowboy Action Shooting™ is by far the most fun. Many years ago, my wife bought my first competition pistol because she was 21 and I was only 20 and too young to purchase a firearm. I have been shooting Cowboy matches for seven years.

There are no better people in the world than Cowboy Action Shooters. My family also loves traveling with me, and I can't wait until my first granddaughter is old enough to compete.

This will be a regular column about money saving tips and ideas that will improve your shooting scores. Any idea or tip you have that will make our shooting experience more enjoyable will be welcomed. You can send your tips and ideas to BBRN@aol.com or Billy Bates, 2302 Winthrop Dr. SW, Decatur, Alabama 35603. Please include your name, alias and the name of your club.

GRAVER BILL'S TIPS:

(1) Try shooting different shapes of bullets. I accidentally found out my '73 cycles flat point bullets faster and smoother.

(2) You can buy a watch lubricant called KT-22 at jewelry supply companies. I use it on the internal parts of my '73, the barrel lock of my double, and the cylinder pin of my Rugers. It seems to make my guns cycle smoother.

(3) This next tip can apply to new shooters or old shooters wanting to buy a new rifle. Recently my rifle broke, and I had to borrow several rifles from fellow shooters, so I ended up using many kinds of guns with action jobs done by several different gunsmiths. I found a big difference in the action smoothness from one gun to the next. So, I suggest you try different guns before you plunk down hard earned money for a new rifle.

(4) Lizard litter used in the cages of snakes and lizards can be obtained at some pet stores. It will work for a tumbling media for cleaning and polishing empty brass. Be sure to buy the package that says it's made from crushed nut shells.

(5) Sometimes an empty shotgun shell gets stuck in a dirty chamber and slows down a fast reload. A quick swipe with a brush will stop this. I found a “pipe cleaning” brush at a chain hardware store for $5.99 that works well, and if I lose or damage it, I'm not out $40 to $60, the cost of a good shotgun bore brush.

All right folks, send me your ideas and tips so we can make our Cowboy Action Shooting™ the best experience possible and we can keep this column going! 🐾

Lest we forget the role played in the Old West by the U. S. Army, it is appropriate we take a look at a few of the men who were instrumental in enabling the occupation of the frontier by those whose vision, both good and bad, created the nation as we know it. Many of these men's names are emblazoned in our history books—Custer, Sherman, Crook, and Miles, but many others served their country with honor and courage, displayed uncommon leadership and skill—and disappeared with the passage of years, to be remembered only by those whose business it is to remember such things.

Adna Chaffee is one such man. He is perhaps the only man to ever serve as Army Chief of Staff who not only did not attend West Point, but actually enlisted in the Army as a private in the Civil War and rose steadily through the ranks to the highest levels of command. Such a man had to be one of such a high level of skill, courage, and leadership that he was acknowledged, recognized, and rewarded with promotion by his superiors, something that was not often done by glory-seeking officers who resented and blocked advancement of others whose accomplishments might dim their own.

Chaffee's 45-year career began as a private in the 6th U. S. Cavalry Regiment in 1861. By 1862 he was already a Sergeant and a 2nd Lieutenant by 1863. Continued meritorious action in several battles, including being wounded twice and even captured temporarily, led to promotions to 1st Lieutenant and Captain.

Choosing to remain in the Army following the Civil War, Chaffee saw considerable action against the Comanches in Texas and the Apaches in Arizona, for which he was brevetted Major and Lt. Colonel. At the Battle of Big

U.S. Army In The Old West . . .

Dry Wash against the Apaches in Arizona, he brilliantly defeated an entrenched band of Apache warriors with a small force of cavalry that included famed scout Al Siebert and then-Lieutenant Tom Cruse, who was awarded the Medal of Honor for his actions in the battle.

He became a full Colonel as an instructor of tactics at the Fort Leavenworth Infantry and Cavalry School. As Chief of Staff to the military governor of Cuba following the Spanish-American War, he was further promoted to Brigadier and Major General. It is interesting to note that almost every promotion was accompanied by citations for gallantry and courage in action. The man was a true warrior.

He commanded the U. S. Army China Relief Expedition in the Boxer Rebellion in China, where he demanded—and got—the most ethical treatment of the Chinese from his troops, for which the Chinese rendered him the greatest respect.

A wonderful story is told of the General during that campaign—in stark contrast to his own troops' discipline and restraint, the Russian troops in the adjoining district raped and looted and destroyed with abandon. When they were foolish enough to encroach on the American zone, Chaffee took his immediate aides with him and stormed into the Russian commanding officer's tent, upbraided the startled Russian in language too colorful to print, threatened annihilation of the Russian troops if such behavior was repeated, turned his back on the speechless officer, and marched out. The Russians' behavior was greatly mollified thereafter, though they continued an occasional atrocity.

Chaffee was instrumental in the capture of Beijing, relieving the foreign citizens and embassy staffs entrapped in the Legation Quarter, and ending the rebellion. He then served as military governor of the Philippines and Commander of the East before assuming the rank of Lt. General and Army Chief of Staff, where he developed and implemented far-reaching changes in the Army's organization and doctrine, including implementation of the awarding of campaign medals, which are a major part of military tradition to this day.

Chaffee was one of Ohio's many contributions to American history, a real "soldier's soldier," and a true American military hero. His legacy did not end with his retirement in 1906. His son, Major General Adna Chaffee, Jr., became a military legend in his own right, responsible for development of the Army's mechanized force beginning in World War I. It is for him that Fort Chaffee in Alabama is named.

Thomas "Bear River" Smith

Joe Fasthorse, SASS #48769

THOMAS "BEAR RIVER" SMITH was born in 1830. He tamed the rip-roaring cowtown of Abilene, Kansas when he took the job as Town Marshal in 1869. He was a fearless lawman who preferred to keep the peace without resorting to gunplay. However, he always wore two pistols in plain sight so lawbreakers would know he meant business.

Smith was able to handle most hard cases with his bare hands. When Big Hank Hawkins and Wyoming Will got drunk and rowdy, Smith beat both men at the same time and ran them out of town. In 1870, Andrew McConnell and Moses Miles murdered Jack Shea. Smith attempted to arrest them and a gunfight erupted. Bear River was shot in the chest, but before he went down, he killed McConnell.

While Smith lay unconscious, Miles grabbed an ax and cut off the lawman's head. The citizens of Abilene erected an inscribed monument in Smith's honor. "A Fearless Hero of Frontier Days Who in Cowboy Chaos Established the Supremacy of Law." Marshal Bear River Smith was replaced by the legendary lawman, "Wild Bill" Hickok.

Dead Man's Burden

By Nubbins Colt, SASS Life #7802

Nubbins Colt,
SASS #7802

About two weeks ago I got an announcement, from Willie Earp, SASS Life #19022, telling me and everyone else on his e-mail list to see a new, independently made movie at the Angelika Theater in Dallas—Dead Man's Burden. I love western movies as much as anyone plus I had a belated, mutual birthday dinner to celebrate with a lovely woman who is one of my best friends on this planet, so I got two tickets, she agreed to go, and we had a grand evening, and here's the movie review. Okay, dinner was great, too, but that's for a different kind of newspaper or magazine.

Quickly, here's the cast and crew – some new, unheard of folks, but not all:

As I said, an independent film. I've seen some bad movies made independently, wooden acting, bad filming, and all kinds of issues. Dead Man's Burden had none of those issues. Oh my goodness, was it ever an independently made film without issues—it was spectacular! Not a spectacle in the way of the Magnificent Seven, for instance, or Ben Hur, would be called spectacular—grand, loud, fast and furious, with a cast of thousands, so to speak, but more in the way that Casablanca is spectacular—gripping, deep, thought provoking, even a little disturbing.

I have to admit when I first tried to buy tickets on-line I could not find a link for this film, but I did find the producer's e-mail address and, as you probably know, your Nubbins not being particularly shy, I asked her directly. Veronica Nickel sent me a better link and afterwards I "warned" her I have written various reviews and stories for SASS' Cowboy Chronicle, and she could expect to see a review in that periodical in the not too distant future. She was excited by that prospect but, as you can imagine, hopeful I would enjoy it. Also, she told me the writer/director would be at the screening I was planning to attend and she would let him know I was coming. Even so, that doesn't guarantee a good review, donchano! What guarantees a good review is excellent acting, top notch cinematography, and a gripping, unsettling story that leaves the viewer kind of thunderstruck—and that's what Dead Man's Burden delivered.

Apparently it will stay in limited release and then go directly to DVDs, video on demand, etc. Get a copy—you will be mesmerized!

Because I planned to write this review I watched Dead Man's Burden with a more critical eye than the casual moviegoer I usually am. So, when the glare of the sun almost made me want to squint and reach for sunglasses, and definitely DID make me feel what the characters felt, I took note of that excellent camera work.

After the movie, the writer/director, Jared Moshe, answered questions, and the discussion got around to “shaky cam” versus “steady cam.” Well, I had already taken notice when the scenes got “shaky,” which fit perfectly well, and I thought to myself, “Self, someone did some marvelous cinematography. I’ll be sure to mention that.”

I watched the character development carefully as well—he did such a great job that my own emotions started to come into play. If I get emotional when watching a movie, then you have to know it has simply and wonderfully whisked me away.

The plot, both simple on the surface and deeply complex beneath, is we find ourselves in 1870s New Mexico, and a repudiated, disowned son has returned to the family farm after having been gone for years during and after the Civil War, only to find his parents deceased and his now fully grown sister and her husband struggling desperately to survive and wanting to sell the place and move to California. There is an underlying mystery big brother has to solve, and resolve, and the tension boils towards an explosion. And that’s all I will tell you about that! The family is originally from Texas, and two of Martha’s brothers were killed in the war, one at Sharpsburg and one at Chickamauga. Brother Wade was supposedly dead, too, so they’re all shocked at his return.

During questioning, some interesting facts were brought to light by the writer/director. They chose this particular setting in New Mexico and literally filmed the entire movie in 18 days—three six-day work weeks. He explained how they found the two cabins used in the film and why they had cactus on the roof of the sod cabin (authenticity—folks did that to keep marauding Apaches from clambering up onto the roofs). He even told us about the various construction changes they made to get the overall, farm appearance encompassing the small, sod hut. He discussed the firearms and how they were selected, and for the Catboy Chronicle audience, I will expand on the subject.

Wade McCurry comes home with a Civil War Henry Rifle and a blackpowder revolver. His sister, Martha McCurry, uses a single shot, long barreled Enfield rifle, probably a Pattern 1853. Heck Kirkland, Martha’s husband (note the different names and think about that) carried, to my great delight, a LeMat revolver. Three Penny Hank carries a double barreled, dual hammer shotgun. I am uncertain what gun E. J. Lane carried, but I think it was a Colt Paterston. For a little hint of the tensions involved, remember just who was most likely to have left the Civil War armed with a Henry rifle and, as a counterpoint, Martha’s new husband clearly fought on the Southern side and is armed with a Confederate LeMat. Each of these men has some unfortunate war history of their own they prefer to keep to themselves. It makes for a great screenplay and wonderfully tense moments!

All of the guns are used correctly and in the gunfight that is part of the dénouement, I counted the shots (of course I did – wouldn’t you?!) and the total is 16—six from the revolver and ten from the LeMat. During the discussion I actually told Jared Moshe I did that and thanked him for his excellent firearms usage, and he exclaimed, “I KNEW IT! I knew someone was going to count the shots!” We were all amused.

Having the discussion with the writer after the film was over was refreshing from a number of standpoints. Not only did we get explanations about why some of the characters did certain things that otherwise would have remained speculative, but the lighter moments relieved the stunning impact of the conclusion. It’s different. It’s real.

Be prepared to really find Dead Man’s Burden is a fine piece of Western movie entertainment, but it’s not singing cowboys or The Lone Ranger (the original, not the silly modern versions), True Grit, or even Django Unchained, so ... be prepared! As a matter of fact, be very prepared.

The match takes place at the Ben Avery Shooting Facility, a 1600-acre group of ranges in North Phoenix. There are over 140 shooting groups with signed user contracts with Ben Avery. And, tens of thousands of individual shooters use the various ranges each year. Working with these groups, the Rough Riders negotiated for the construction of three full-scale buildings that are used by Winter Range and by numerous other shooting disciplines during the year. Given the needs of these other shooting groups, the remaining bays and ranges have been kept open and free of permanent structures. Thus, each and every stage front, prop, and hundreds of decorative items have to be built, assembled on-site, used during the match and then disassembled, removed, and stored for the next year. How does this increasingly large and complex event come together?

I. Preparation

Planning for Winter Range normally begins the day after the previous Winter Range ends. So, on Monday evening, after the props and equipment are stored, everyone gathers together and starts reading the shooter comment cards. Ideas get batted about on how to improve things the next year and some preliminary discussions take place on what new props can be constructed or need to be replaced. Within a week to ten days after Winter Range concludes, the Winter Range Board convenes to hold an after action meeting. Each board member has responsibilities for particular functions at the match and each discusses what went well and what could be improved. Meetings are also held with the Maricopa County Sheriff's Office and Ben Avery staff to discuss any issues they may have observed during the match. Within two weeks after Winter Range ends, the ranges and classrooms needed for the next Winter Range have to be reserved since the other user groups reserve the various ranges at Ben Avery months in advance.

Throughout the year meetings take place to discuss new props, what new equipment is needed, what targets need to be replaced, the theme for the next Winter Range, looking for sources for the hundreds of awards to be given out at Winter Range, etc. And, the Board is constantly looking for and recruiting new people for the board to replace retiring board members. As the months progress, plans for new stages are drawn. Steel for new targets is ordered. Work details are set up, work assignments made, and budgets created for the various board members. Most of this planning takes place in the summer months when it is simply too hot to work out on the range. As the weather cools off in October, the work moves outside, and the pace begins to quicken dramatically.

Thousands of pounds of armor plate begin arriving to make into new targets. Photo 1. Winter Range replaces one-third of its targets each year, and over the past two years, the plate size has grown to where most of the main match plates are now twenty to twenty-four inches. All of the knockdown target faces were replaced for WR 2013. Photo 2. And, dozens of new shotgun targets were ordered. Photo 3. In order to keep things fresh and interesting, many of the existing props are repainted with new color schemes or repurposed into new structures.

Photo 4. This year one of the major new facades was a railroad trestle. We'll follow the progress on the trestle from construction to final setup on the range. First, plans are drawn up for the basic structure and a "look" conceived for the final stage. Work begins on one pier, Photo 5, and soon a second is completed. Photo 6. The trestle is built from solid wood and held together with over 100 3/4" bolts. Those piers are HEAVY. It took eight guys to move one ten feet. Photo 7. Part of the “look” for the stage was that the trestle crossed a tree and boulder filled canyon. There aren’t any trees or large boulders at Ben Avery, so they were created from Styrofoam, wood, and plaster. Photo 8. A little carefully applied coloring and streaking and the Styrofoam and plaster were turned into rocks and boulders. Photo 9. As the days pass, the activity changes from preparation to execution.

II. Execution

Ten to twelve days before the start of Winter Range (WR) the main tent starts going up. Photos 10 and 11. Closely followed by the tents that will comprise the vendor village. Photo 12. On the Wednesday before WR, setup begins. However, Ben Avery is a very busy range and in the days just prior to WR, the parking lots were full. Photo 13. However, these vehicles were not from the WR setup crew, they were for the shooters involved in four other matches! There was a silhouette match, IPSC match, bench rest match, and a 1000-yard long-range match all going on while the work to build Winter Range was starting. Photos 14 and 15. As soon as these matches were completed, the WR work crews moved in behind them. Thirty-five individuals known as Rangers back up the Rough Riders. The Rangers volunteer for a two-week tour of duty with the Rough Riders and are the backbone of the match setup and operations during the match. Numerous volunteers also show up to assist in setting up WR. They and the Rangers are broken up into work crews, each crew headed by a Ranger Captain. These crews have the responsibility to set up the various stage scenarios.

Each Ranger Captain is given a construction manual. The manual is color-coded and shows what equipment needs to be delivered to each stage. The ground is marked with color-coded spray paint to coincide with the manual and shows where to place the targets, stage props, and stage fronts. We'll follow the progress of setting up the new trestle stage. Photo 16 shows the bay shortly after the shooters shown in Photo 14 vacated it. The ground is marked and the first thing that must be delivered are the targets since in many cases once the stage fronts are erected there is no room for the target trailers to get behind the props. As shown in Photo 7, the trestles were extremely HEAVY. Thus, they had to be completely dismantled, carried to the bay, and then reconstructed. Photos 17, 18 and 19. The hand-car and its operator were installed, Photo 20, and the rocks, trees and other props added to complete the stage. Photo 21. This year's theme was western musicals. 24 was setup to replicate the look of the handcar scene from “Blazing Saddles.” (The opening line for the stage was “What in the wide, wide world of sports is a going on here!”)

Other crews were working on other scenarios. Here is the crew building the new church, Photo 22, and they had made significant progress by the end of the day. Photo 23. Other crews worked on the River Boat, Photo 24, and all the other stages. It was sunny and 75 during setup, but there were long-range forecasts of windy weather. So, many of the stage fronts were braced with steel angle iron front and back in the event of strong winds. Photo 25. (It was surprising the number of people that asked, “won’t those steel poles get in the way of the shooters? They were all assured the poles would be removed before the match.) Behind the firing line there are also hundreds of props set up around the ranges to provide the Winter Range ambiance.

For example, there is an Indian village. Photo 26. This year heavy canvas splatter guards were installed to eliminate the need for hauling hundreds of hay bales to the range. These guards were all “branded” to make them look more western. Photo 27. A new front for the main tent was built. Photo 28. And two 80KW generators installed to power WR.

Photo 29. The final step before setup is declared complete is inspection by the Beautification Committee!!!! Photo 30. The Beautification Committee inspects each and every stage and every prop on the range, touches up paint, moves items that aren’t just in the right places, and in-general makes sure the range is a pleasing sight for the shooters. Once their okay has been given, the range work is declared completed.

Inside the main tent additional work is going on to make sure registration is ready to open on Sunday afternoon and start checking in the 1000 plus Action and Mounted Shooters. It takes a lot of time and manpower to stuff 800+ shooter bags. Photo 31. The new prize drawing was also set-up and an early arrival looked over the old glass jars. Photo 32. In front of each jar was a list of prizes that would be drawn from that jar. Photo 33. This year WR tried something new. Each shooter was given a pair of embroidered gun rugs when they checked in. Photo 34. In addition each shooter was given one prize ticket. Rather

III. The Match

Registration was ready for business at noon on Sunday and Winter Range was officially open. On Monday and Tuesday the Wild Bunch National Championship was shot in sunny and seventy degree weather. It was perfect. Then on late Tuesday night and in the pre-dawn hours of Wednesday, an unprecedented storm hit. There have been times when a few flakes of snow have fallen on Phoenix, but they always melted before they hit the ground. On Wednesday there was pounding rain, sleet, hail, a snowstorm, and something I never heard of before – grapple! Grapple, as explained by the local newscasters, is caused by the partial melting of a snowflake that refreezes before reaching the ground. Holy mackerel! In Phoenix? Everything was covered in snow and ice. Photo 35. And the snow, ice, and slush had to be shoveled from the main tent as it was starting to sag. Photo 36. Soon every dry gully in the area was a raging than giving a few large prizes and lots of small ones, the major sponsors were each asked to provide only large gifts. (Guns, reloading machines, complete wardrobes, etc.) A jar was setup for each sponsor and the shooters could pick which prize jar they wished to deposit their ticket. A drawing was held on Thursday night, the winners posted all day Friday, and the prizes handed out on Saturday. The drawing went very smoothly and the shooters seemed to like the opportunity to win a major prize.

Wednesday is side match and warm-up match day. A surprising number of brave souls shot the side matches in the storm. Photo 38. However, on most of the warm-up matches by the time the first stage was shot most people elected to seek shelter rather than shoot the other three stages. The Plainsmen not only had to contend with the storm, they had to try and load their muzzleloaders in it. They did things democratically and voted to call the match after one stage.

On Thursday morning the main Cowboy Action Shooting™ match started under cloudy, but dry skies. As the day wore on, the skies cleared and the temperatures warmed. Each wave of the Cowboy Action Shooting™ match began with a memorial over-flight of military training aircraft. They circled the range and flew at low altitude directly over the firing line. Photos 39 and 40. At the end of the firing, one plane peeled off trailing smoke in the missing man formation. Photo 41. Everyone tipped their hats and thought about our friends and associates that passed the previous year, and everyone thanked our men and women in the armed forces worldwide.

42

And then the main match shooting began! Walking up and down the lines people renewed old friendships and made new ones. Judge Roy Bean, SASS #1, was visiting people out by the Ranger Shack. Photo 42. Gen-

The WR stages are always written to provide fun for all and to provide a challenge to the top shooters. A couple of stages let the shooter decide the order in which he/she wanted to shoot the targets. Some were mirror stages so a shooter could start on the left or the right side of a stage. There were a few knock-downs and one aerial target. Some stages were up close and fast. Others required a little more deliberation. In other words, there was something for everyone. The weather once again turned into typical sunny Phoenix weather and all was well. Or was it? The wind everyone was worried about for Wednesday had never materialized. The match was over and it looked like, other than Wednesday side match day, the weather had been about perfect, and everyone was laid back and relaxing. Many visited the WR Saloon that was converted from a shooting stage into a working saloon soon after the shooting was over. Photos 46 and 47.

Then about 1:00 a.m. Sunday morning it struck! An unforeseen windstorm swept the range and took out an entire section of the vendor village. Photos 48, 49 and 50. Guns, clothes, leather goods, and all manner of products were strewn about the desert floor. Soon vendors and

IV. Sponsors, Vendors and Entertainment

At any large match shooting comprises only about 1/3 of a shooter's time. For non-shooting wives, children, and visitors, a match would be boring without things to see and do. Sponsors, vendors, and entertainment fill this gap. This year the match Master Sponsor was Wild West Mercantile, the Premier Sponsors were Phil and Jo Doornbos, and the Main Tent Sponsor was F.A.P F.lli Pietta. Out on range the Girl Scouts were on one end, Photo 58, and the Boy Scouts (selling brass) on the other, Photo 59. Vendors of all sorts were in between. From guns, to leather, to clothes, and dozens of other western products the vendors were out in force. (See side bar.) Over 200 radio ads were placed in order to try and bring more visitors out to buy goods from the vendors. A local country and western station even broadcast live on-site. Photo 60. There were strolling troubadours, Photos 61 and 62, a rodeo for the spectators to watch, Photo 63, a magician, and cowboy fast draw for everyone to try their hand against the clock. Photo 64. At night there were banquets, bingo, and cowboy poker. On Saturday night there was a packed house. Photo 65. And who were they all there to see? None other than Sheriff Joe Arpaio, known as America's toughest Sheriff. What is not so well known outside of Arizona is that he also has a comedy routine and performs in local comedy clubs. He had everyone rolling in the aisles.

And food? There were food vendors selling cowboy food cooked in Dutch ovens, Bar-B-Q, Philly Cheese Steak sandwiches, Buffalo burgers, kettle corn, ice cream, and pretty much something to meet all tastes.

V. Takedown and Winter Range 2014

As previously noted, Ben Avery is a busy range. In fact, a large muzzle loading event starts on the Wednesday after Winter Range so EVERYTHING has to be removed from the range no later than Tuesday afternoon. Just as methodically as everything was put up for the match, it is taken down and stored in a yard a few hundred yards away from the main range. Winter Range has hundreds of targets, tons of hardware (nuts, bolts, paint, etc.) and tools, and dozens of stage fronts. These all have to be inventoried and carefully stored out of the summer sun. The storage yard now contains five large conex containers and a large covered shed. All of the area in between is filled with targets. Because of the abbreviated closing ceremony, many shooter comment cards were not turned in, so the customary reading of the comments on Monday afternoon had to be delayed. The comment form was posted on-line and over 400 comments were received. They have been read, suggestions made, the ranges reserved and the planning begun for Winter Range 2014! Next year's match will take place from February 24 through March 2. See you there!!!

Bismark, ND – Each year when the snow melts, I begin to feel the anticipation of a new shooting season, and I cannot wait to get outdoors onto the range to be among friendly faces and share smiles and laughter over a common interest. Ever since I joined SASS, much to my father's delight, I have grown into a confident adult and have become a familiar face on our home range. The nurturing society that is the Dakota Roughriders has made me believe Cowboy Action Shooting™ is more than just a sport ... it is a community of well-wishers, laughers, and overall jovial people who have never failed to ask my father where I am when I am not present at a match. This "family" I have come to have over the years has always included me in whatever needs to be done. I have never felt out of place on the range while "hunting steel," and I credit that to having a group of successful shooters surrounding me and teaching me the "spirit of the game."

Having successful shooters on the range makes for a myriad of opportunities and lessons learned. By having successful shooters, the atmosphere is friendly and safe so new shooters feel comfortable and have a great time at the range. As well as having fun, both new and returning shooters always learn how to be a safety spectator by learning about the different guns used and how to correctly handle them. Everyone learns how to be safe and watch for any sort of malfunction that might put someone in danger. The practice of being a safety spectator is one of the first lessons many of the successful shooters I have met like to pass along. It makes for a safe range and a fun time.

Along with that, it creates a place where people can joke, have fun, and makes for a more relaxed run at the shooting line. I have always been comfortable on the line and have always felt my fellow shooters are interested in how I shoot. I appreciate their pointers and always take them to heart.

One of my favorite moments was when I learned how to "place my feet like I meant business." This happened after a few years of shooting. I was doing fine in my category, but I still wanted to do better as a shooter, smoother in my transitions, and act more "into the game." One day a friend approached me at the gun cart (our "trusty steed" as I like to call it) and mentioned I was not "leaning into it." I asked him what he meant, and he explained that I looked too proper. I was standing upright like a lady and not anchoring myself with a well-placed foot. He showed me how to remedy it, and on the next stage I "leaned in." Not only did I feel more ready for the timer and my first shot, I flew through the stage and had more fun. I always remember to place a foot and "lean in."

Being around so many shooters who have been kind and offered a helping hand has shown me the importance of having successful shooters in SASS. I am forever grateful to those who gave me the courage to step up to the line at the first match and convinced me it is not "a big bad shotgun." I am even more grateful to those who have continued to help over the years as I have grown into a recognized shooter in our state for both talent and friendliness. I am most grateful for learning from my Cowboy Action Shooting™ family and have taken it into my everyday life, becoming a trusted friend and helpful acquaintance to many. I have learned from an environment of

What the Second Amendment Means to Me

Edited by Justice Lily Kate, SASS #1000

Owasso, OK - As an Oklahoman and citizen of the United States of America, the Second Amendment is very important to me. I cannot even fathom the thought of having to live without its protection. The right to keep and bear arms is essential to every American's life, whether they realize it or not. It is a key part to America's safety and wellbeing.

The Second Amendment gives us the right to protect ourselves. People feel safer knowing they have a method of self-defense in the home in case they are burglarized or threatened. Crime rates are proven to be lower in nations that allow firearms for protection. In nations that have prohibited handguns, such as Great Britain, Australia, and Canada, there has been a dramatic increase in crime rates and riots, even knife violence. While citizens may still own weapons, they must be placed and stored in certified ranges or law enforcement care, in which circumstances they are useless for self-protection. In my opinion, banning arms only strips away a source of defense for law-abiding citizens; it's a bit naïve to think criminals are going to willingly turn in their weapons. The police force would have to be extremely large in order to protect a defenseless population as huge as America's.

In many regions, Americans use firearms to hunt, both for sport and for necessity of food and to protect livestock. At my own home in Collinsville, OK, we have had to defend our animals and pets from coyotes and other vermin. Some families' livestock are their livelihood and the only source of income, and the Second Amendment gives them the right to protect it.

Now that I have been trained to safely handle a firearm, which is something I will continue to study and spread to others by example, I feel much safer knowing that if misfortune ever strikes I have the opportunity and means to defend myself and my loved ones. I have heard stories from my teachers about being robbed and kidnapped; even my mother has had a horrifying kidnapping experience. As a teenaged girl, I can sleep much better at night knowing I have the ability to prevent the same from happening to me.

Finally, without the right to bear arms, I would not be able to enjoy the great sport of Cowboy Action Shooting™. I love being able to go out to the range and shoot with my Dad and sister. It means a lot to me to be able to spend quality time with my Dad, participating together in something we both love to do. It's rare one finds an activity they find genuinely enjoyable, regardless of the people involved and the competition it creates. I am thankful I get to enjoy this one.

I hope to see many generations to come enjoy the opportunities made possible by our Second Amendment in careers, business, and pleasure. Plus my leather holsters would be mighty lonesome without their six-guns if we were placed under a firearms ban!!

Valdosta, GA - Hugh H. "Papa Jake" Jacobs Sr. of Hahira, GA, passed away February 28, 2013 at his residence after a brief illness. He was born August 28, 1944 in Panama City, FL. He was a member of the Lakeland Church of Christ and was a veteran of the United States Navy.

Papa Jake was one of the founding members of the Valdosta Vigilance Committee and wore club badge VVC #4. He also belonged to the Doc Holiday Immortals club in Griffin, GA. He untiringly helped Cowboy clubs and Cowboy shooters every chance he had and was always willing to lend a helping hand to anyone in need.

Papa Jake loved SASS and the Cowboy way very much. He participated in many local, state, and regional matches around the south, and was always willing to step up and help. He did not like to be idle. Papa Jake's love of SASS spread to his granddaughter Wild Jessie Lou, SASS

#92381, who has enjoyed shooting with her grandfather for several years. Two of his sons and other family members have recently joined SASS and are in the process of getting their gear together.

Each year, Papa Jake rounded up all kinds of door prizes for the Shootout on the Little River, the annual match of the Valdosta Vigilance Committee.

His friends have many fond memories of Papa Jake, and will miss him greatly.

READING CATTLE BRANDS

By Swallowfork, SASS #35326

We all have heard the expression, "Riding for the Brand." But how many of us really know how to read a brand? (If yer gonna ride for it, ya pretty well better know how to read it!)

Various jurisdictions have their own specific rules regarding the branding of livestock. However, there are many similarities in brands across North America. Frequently, the same character may be called one thing in one place and by a different name in another province or state. For example, what is termed a "Half Diamond" in Alberta may be called a "Rafter" in Montana. This article deals primarily with brands in the Province of Alberta, Canada.

The first brand to be registered in western Canada was "71" on the left rib. Percy Neale and Sam Steele, former North West Mounted Police officers, registered this brand as partners in January 1880. Five more brands were registered the same year. Twenty-nine were registered in 1881 and another thirty-four in 1882. The two oldest brands in current use that have been kept registered are the circle "O," on the left hip for cattle and the "OH" for the left rib on cattle and the left shoulder for horses. They were registered in July 1881 and have been kept active over the years at the same ranch location where they were initially registered. As of this writing, there were 50,000 registered brands in Alberta.

The basic design for most brands consists of a combination of characters (letters and numbers) and symbols. All letters in the alphabet have been used in brands. Although the letter "Q" can be found in older Alberta brands, it is no longer used due to the similarity to an "O." Similarly, the letter "G" is now only used in the reversed position  so as not to be confused with a "C."

Other reversed letters that are used are:

These are read as Reversed "B," Reversed "D," etc.

Any numeral can be used except zero "0" and "1" which are registered as the letters "O" and "L."

The design characters currently in use are: anchor, triangle, diamond and box.

When the top is toward the right, it is a "Lazy Right." Lazy rights are no longer used in new Alberta brands.

Letters that are joined back-to-back are referred to as "Monogrammed."  The E is a "Reversed E" and the P is a "Monogram P."

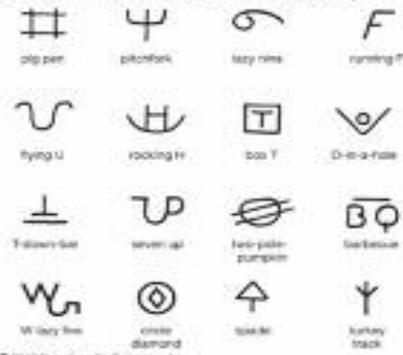

The symbols bar , quarter circle,  and half diamond  are used above or below characters in a brand. A bar above or below the characters is referred to as a "Bar." A bar directly in front, behind or between characters is known as a "Running Bar" ( "Running Bar A").

The ends of a quarter circle point away from the brand characters  while the half diamonds have the ends pointing toward the brand characters.  Older brands may be found with the half diamond and quarter circle pointed in the opposite direction.

 "6" over 6",  "S-7" "S Running Bar 7",  "Running Bar Reverse E Monogram P",  "Bar Reverse K Monogram L."

There is a huge variety of older brand characters and symbols which are not found on new brands in Alberta. Here are a few of the many examples:

Brands can be registered on any of six animal positions for both cattle and horses. The cattle positions are shoulder, rib and hip on both the left and right side. The horse positions are jaw, shoulder, and thigh on both sides. The same sets of brand characters applied to two different positions are considered to be registered as two entirely different brands.

So there you have it. Not so complicated after all!

SASS #22963

By Wolverine Wrangler, SASS #22963

In the 50s, 60s, and early 70s Western series dominated network television. Here is a look at one of those TV shows.

Annie Oakley starring Gail Davis fictionalized the life of famous sharpshooter Annie Oakley. It ran from January 1954 to February 1957. Reruns were from Gail Davis (Betty Jeane Grayson) as Annie Oakley.

Gene Autry discovered Gail Davis, created the Annie Oakley TV show, and cast her as the star.

1959 – 1960 and from 1964 – 1965. It ran for three seasons, for a total of 81 black and white episodes, each 25 minutes long.

Gail Davis (1925 – 1997) was the daughter of a small town physician. Her real name was Betty Jeane Grayson. After moving to Hollywood, CA, Betty Jeane signed a contract with MGM in 1946. It was then she took the name “Gail Davis.” She played many supporting roles in films, mostly Westerns, and was discovered by Gene Autry who created and produced the Annie Oakley TV show casting her as the star.

The Annie Oakley show co-starred Brad Johnson as Deputy Sheriff Lofty Craig and Jimmy Hawkins, as Annie’s brother, Tagg. In one episode, “Bull’s Eye,” the role of Tagg was played by Billy Gray, better known as James “Bud” Anderson, Jr., on Father Knows Best. In the series, Annie Oakley rode a horse named Target, Tagg’s horse was Pixie, and Lofty’s was named Forest. Annie and Tagg lived in the town of Diablo, Arizona with their uncle, Sheriff Luke MacTavish, who was usually away whenever trouble started. It would then be up to straight-shooting Annie and her “silent suitor” Lofty Craig to rescue law-abiding neighbors and arrest outlaws. Often Tagg would be told to stay in town and out of the way, but through disobedience, the need to relay important new information, or being captured by outlaws, he would end up in the middle of the adventure.

Annie Oakley always wore the same fringed cowgirl outfit, of which 15 or more copies were made throughout the show’s production. Her hairstyle was braided pigtails.

Gail Davis was a skillful horseback rider and toured North America in Gene Autry’s traveling rodeo. She has a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. In 2004, she was posthumously inducted into the National Cowgirl Museum and Hall of Fame in Fort Worth, TX.

I’ll be turning the rotary TV channel selector dial now. Stay tuned. WolverineWrangler@charter.net

Buckaroo POEM

By Buck's Litl Pearl, SASS #35008

(A brief history: Buckaroo Joel, SASS #42218, is the grandson of the late Buck Cahill, formerly known as Litl Buck, SASS #23545, and grandson of Buck's Litl Pearl, SASS #35008, that's me. After Litl Buck passed away, I really wanted to carry on the tradition and encouraged Buckaroo Joel to join me. He was a total stranger to guns at that time, but with a LOT of support from our local Liberty Prairie Regulators in Ripon, WI, he started to shoot. He finally got the courage to shoot his shotgun at the last match of 2012 and is looking forward to using all guns this year. He wrote this poem as a 5th grade class assignment. After finishing, "I am only a Boy" and turning it in to his teacher, he was encouraged to see if he could take it further and proceeded to write "I am only a Gun." He presented this to me on Mothers Day in a frame with his photo from our last shoot. He is amazed that Grandma can shoot, and I am amazed at his writing!)

THE BOY

*By Buckaroo Joel,
SASS #42218*

I am only a boy,
though I do not fear the gun.
A gun tastes like hard-fought victory so hardy and sweet.
A gun feels like a massive weight, though I never let go.
A gun sounds like a thousand cheers, provided by the winning goal.
A gun smells like a blazing wildfire though I contained it.
A gun looks like a looming cliff that I have scaled.
I AM ONLY A BOY.

those years spent with either collateral duties or full time as a firearms instructor. I'm also a life member of the NRA and firmly believe anyone who wants to keep the Second Amendment should join, too. I assure you neither I nor anyone I know feels anything but heartbreak for the children, staff members, and all other victims of the recent string of senseless shooting incidents that have been experienced in different parts of this great country as well as for the families who survive them. Had I or any of my comrades or any of you been present at any of these incidents I know the outcome would have surely been better than it was.

Since statistics are my topic

I'll tell you where most of mine come from. The National Institute of Health (NIH) has done studies through the years, and the anti-gun groups never use the NIH statistics. Hmmm, why might that be? The NIH is a government run operation and has accurate studies in many areas so why not use their figures? The answer is the NIH figures for decades have told the truth and disprove most if not all arguments put forward by the antis. As an example, do you recall years ago when the news going around declared there was a child killed in this country by guns every 10 minutes? I sure do. In order to say that, the study had to include as children people up to the age of 23. They included criminals legally shot and killed by the police. They included criminals legally shot and killed by innocent citizens who were defending themselves or some other innocent person. They included gang bangers who shot and killed each other. You get the idea. They included all these people as "children" in order to be able to make their false claim. Do you feel as insulted by that as I do? I hope so.

NIH studies have shown since the 1930s the population has more than doubled and the number of firearms privately owned by that population has more than quadrupled, but the number of gun injuries has dropped over 65%. WOW, there's one reason NIH studies haven't been used in the

With all the talk about gun control lately and with much of the information being presented to us being plain false, I just have to set the statistical record straight. One thing I need to start out with is I have been in law enforcement since 1978 with many of

CALCUTTA AUCTION
Camp Sturgis Regulators will host a CALCUTTA AUCTION fundraiser for the first time in SASS history. The Calcutta will benefit the new Founders Ranch Legal Defense Fund to proactively provide capital to vigorously protect the legally zoned and safely operated shooting range at Founders Ranch, which is now embattled in a law suit that threatens the future operation of the range.
The costs of defending lawsuits of this kind have been responsible for the decision to close many legally and safely operated shooting ranges all over America. It's time for shooters to ban together and draw the line against frivolous lawsuits that imperil our legal and safe shooting heritage.
Together we can assist SASS efforts to continue to raise the legal ammunition to win this fight.

cry for more restrictive gun laws. More than twice the number of people owning more than four times the number of guns, yet firearms accidents drops by a huge percentage!

There's been considerable misinformation about the affect of concealed carry (CC) laws, too. I've heard people with concerns if a CC law were passed people would be able to shoot anyone for nearly any reason. How ridiculous is that? But, the fact is the laws governing when you can or cannot use a firearm against another person haven't changed, the CC laws just allow people who have proven themselves to be trustworthy law abiding citizens who receive the appropriate training can carry a gun so they have it in case they need it. Sort of like the jack in your car or truck. You hope you don't need it, but if you do it's sure a nice thing to have handy. The facts show almost immediately after a state passes a concealed carry law, they experience a huge drop in violent crimes like robbery, rape, aggravated assault, and of course, murder.

Another interesting fact concerns the number of criminals that are killed by regular citizens. In relation to the number of criminals shot and killed each year by the police, if you were to guess, how many criminals are shot and killed each year by innocent citizens legally in possession of their firearm, employing deadly force legally because their life was in danger? More than twice as many as the police! Wow, that means that regular citizens under threat of deadly force kill a bunch of bad guys every year with their guns. If they hadn't had those firearms, they would in all likelihood have been killed instead of the criminals, and each year we'd have that many LESS good people and that many MORE bad people walking our streets! I don't know about you, but if I had my druthers, I'd rather "lose" the bad guys!

There is also much talk about keeping guns out of the hands of children. Well let's take a look at existing federal gun laws. Currently it is illegal for a person under the age of 18 to purchase or own a long gun (rifle or shotgun), and they can't be in possession of a firearm unless they're under adult supervision. The legal age for handguns is 21. So that means every single time you hear about someone under 21 using a handgun in the commission of a crime, they were already breaking the law, just by having the gun. It is already illegal for our children to own guns or to possess them without adult supervision. It is illegal for convicted felons to own guns or even live in a dwelling where guns are kept legally by other residents.

The NRA has an Eddie Eagle program that for many years has been teaching children if they find a firearm to "Stop, Don't Touch, Leave the Area, Tell an Adult." Here's a list of gun safety suggestions the NIH has posted on their site:

- Teach children they shouldn't touch guns, and if they see a gun, to leave it alone and tell an adult.
- If your children play at another home, talk to the parents about gun safety.
- Treat every gun as if it were loaded.
- Always store guns unloaded.
- Lock guns in a rack or safe, and hide the keys or combination.
- Store ammunition away from guns and keep it locked.
- Don't keep guns in your home if someone in your family has a mental illness, severe depression, or potential for violence.

All of these suggestions are common sense things to do, and you might want to consider using them. Did you notice their very first item matches the NRA's Eddie Eagle program? Wow! The NIH agrees with the NRA!

We could go on and on and on with more statistics, but I hope you now understand when you hear people quoting statistics that support more restrictive gun laws, those statistics are more than likely false and fabricated to make it look like we need more gun laws like Chicago has. Lets see ... Chicago has some of the most restrictive gun laws in the country, yet their crime and murder rates are off the charts! Places with less restrictive gun laws enjoy much lower crime rates. Gee, sure seems plain to see. I'm curious to see what happens to New York's crime rates now that they've adopted some really restrictive gun laws. I know what effect people want them to have on crime. I also know what history says accompanies laws like these. For the sake of people living in New York I hope I'm wrong ... but statistics say I'm right. 🐾

NO COMPROMISE!

By Colonel Dan, SASS #24025, Life / Regulator

There's been a rash of bad news recently for pro-constitutional patriots and yes, our side has taken a few temporary hits, so what do we do now? Do we surrender and acknowledge defeat? Not on your life, we're far from beaten. We soldier on with resolve and never compromise that's what we do! Let's factually analyze the battlefield.

Those states that passed legislation that clearly infringe on our Second Amendment rights and the zealots in Washington who are looking to do the same on the federal level are running wild. Pushing their long held agenda of disarming America and using the Newtown tragedy as the basis for their actions, they're making sure not to waste a crisis. Their solutions as we know, however, would have done nothing to save anyone and will do nothing to prevent such recurrences. In other words, their entire premise is built on a foundation of lies and deceit as it has always been.

I know it, and you know it as do all thinking Americans who base their judgment on fact, truth, history, and logic. But, those pushing this anti-gun agenda dare not use any of these elements, as they would lose the argument. They can't afford to risk exposing the truth else their house of deceit would crumble.

So why have they been relatively successful? I see several factors at play here.

There's a growing number of Americans that haven't had appropriate exposure to the principles of America's founding and guns as have past generations. They could care less if government stepped in and confiscated all the guns—it's not important to them. I saw this in my corporate career when I hired many software engineers in their 20s and 30s who grew up with computer screens, not guns, and couldn't care less about firearms.

Granted this was a narrow sample of that particular generation, but when applied to the general population, I see a positive correlation. So the generational problem is one we face—a generation with minimal experience with or exposure to guns and even less educational exposure to what our Bill of Rights and the Constitution mean to America. In a word, this results in "ignorance," and I don't say that in a personally disparaging way; it's just truth.

Another factor we face is growing apathy. Let's face it; America is rich beyond belief compared to other countries of the current world and those civilizations throughout history. As a result, we've become lethargic to an ever-growing degree because we have access to more than we need to survive. When people reach this state of plenty, they become comfortable in their lethargy. As long as they have food to eat and money to entertain themselves without relatively much worry, "hey, life is good, do what you want world, I'm fine, just don't upset my easy chair." Trouble is, this attitude has always been a fertile field for the tyrant class, and they're nurturing a budding crop in America these days.

As I see it, our main foes in this struggle are deceit, ignorance, and apathy. How do we fight this? I'll just give you the view from my foxhole.

Obviously we must personally try to influence our little part of the world to overcome sociologically based apathy and ignorance. In the political arena, we must adopt a unified NO compromise approach.

As I've written many times in the past, when those charged with enforcing and upholding the law ignore the law, there is no law. The anti-gun element continues to demonstrate it will stop at nothing in their attempt to infringe on your right to keep and bear arms and no amount of discussion will sway them. Facts, the law, and the Constitution be damned. Those who refuse to accept facts as part of any discussion are clearly driven by an agenda of deceit, not truth, and therefore honest dialog is futile.

If anti-gunners can't ban guns outright they'll try to control ammunition, impose new taxes on firearms and components, require onerous insurance laws, expand medically based restrictions on gun ownership, sign on to United Nations treaties, compel magazine restrictions, demand universal background checks that open the door to universal registration, which in turn leads to confiscation, and so on. Bottom line, they're attacking on multiple fronts simultaneously.

They demand compromise on issues they have no constitutional standing to even broach. Many on the pro-gun side unfortunately are falling for these offers of compromise, deluding themselves into thinking that if we just give in to these few new restrictions, they'll go away. News flash: they'll never go away, and Thomas Jefferson knew it—"The natural progress of things is for liberty to yield, and government to gain ground."

This anti-gun assault will not stop until the pro-gun side stops it cold. The willingness to talk about degrees of infringement must be steadfastly resolute and irreversibly limited to just one word—NO! We must refuse to discuss any proposed infringement with those whose agenda is based on deceit and whose ultimate goal is subjugation. Simply put, if patriots are unwilling to resolutely say "NO," then we will indeed lose.

You cannot compromise away the principle of unalienable rights because those rights were not endowed by man, but by God. Compromise of principle is therefore not compromise; it's surrender. As Jefferson advised, "In matters of style, swim with the current; in matters of principle, stand like a rock."

Patriots must stand like a rock today, or America could fall like straw tomorrow.

Are we outnumbered and is our fight futile? Keep in mind the overwhelming odds faced by our 18th century forefathers. Only 1/3rd supported the Revolution, 1/3rd opposed it, and the final 1/3rd was very much apathetic.

What saved us then will save us today—a passionate commitment and dedication of a unified force to a righteous cause. Pro-gun organizations and forces should combine, coordinate, and cooperate to focus their stand on the principled ground we know to be right and do so with unwavering resolve. I wrote about this in my April editorial; "Needed: 1798 Resolve in 2013."

Can we win? The answer is emphatically, yes! I leave you with a quote from one of our more well known founders who convinced many doubters of his era with this:

"They tell us ... that we are weak - unable to cope with so formidable an adversary. But when shall we be stronger? Will it be when we are totally disarmed ... Three million people, armed in the holy cause of liberty ... are invincible by any force which our enemy can send against us." ~ Patrick Henry ~

That three million of Patrick Henry's day has grown to 80 - 100 million gun owners today, and if there's anything politicians fear, its great numbers unified and focused on a righteous cause. A force that grows in resolve to become an unstoppable tsunami of political power will defeat any force thrown against it.

Keep the heat on high; NEVER compromise your principles and NEVER surrender.

Steel your nerve, remain faithfully resolute, and soldier on my friends.
